Vandenberg Sees Tax Plan 'Hoax'; Bill Ready Today

House Due to Get Measure Tomorrow

Ways Committee Is About to Complete Drafting Work.

The President's new "tax-the-wealthy" bill ran into a fresh wave of opposition yesterday on the eve of its presentation today to the full Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, often mentioned as a Republican presidential possibility, termed the bill "as grim a hoax as ever was perpetrated on the country," and the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York attacked it as an unjustified burden on business and asked that it be not rushed to completion.

"Under our competitive industrial system," the bank's statement declared, "the quest for profit is the mainspring of enterprise and industrial and material progress, and, without security of private property, profit is meaningless. The right to enjoy property and the right to transmit it are the two principal phases of that security."

In a radio address last night Senator Jesse H. Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, declared that in promoting the tax bill "the Administration has carried out almost to the letter the pledges of the Socialist candidate in 1932 and has completely ignored those of the Democratic platform."

Hastings Entering Row.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton called for the full House Ways and Means Committee to meet today to receive the measure drafted by the Democratic members. It is intended to speed committee action so that the bill, estimated to yield perhaps $250,000,000 a year in revenue, can be sent to the House tomorrow or Wednesday.

A fight to prevent action on the tax bill by forcing adjournment on August 10, likely will be precipitated today when Senator Daniel O. Hastings, (Republican), of Delaware, will call up his adjournment resolution. Chances for its adoption are considered extremely slender.

The tax bill drawn by the House committee would raise "only a little extra pocket change," Vandenberg said. He used the terms "pell-mell pantomime," "sterile political gesture" and "flagrant flirtation" with real share-the-wealth ideas.

"As a contribution to the public credit," he added, "it is as grim a hoax as was ever perpetrated on the country. As a distributor of wealth it is a mere vagrant flirtation with the left wing idea.

Plan Called Wasteful.

"Taxes should be assessed not only in proportion to the ability to pay, but also in proportion to the bills to be paid. Our bills for the next fiscal year should be courageously reduced to the minimum permitted by our unavoidable necessities. Painful though it is going to be for all of us, when pay day comes and we confront the stark reality that there is no Santa Claus, we cannot indefinitely postpone the preservation of national solvency.

"Since we cannot anticipate next year's budget, we cannot anticipate the needed tax. Therefore, we cannot intelligently leigslate on taxes today, and his is self-confessed when we chatter of taxes in millions to offfset deficits in billions.

"This bill wastes new tax resources because it does not tie them to a budgetry objective. Congress should suspend this pell-mell pantomime and prepare itself to meet the real issue in a real way next January."

Republican members of the Ways and Means committee last night were in the dark, officially, on provisions of the bill, hence no plans had been made for a concerted attack on it.

"We don't know what is in the bill," said Representative Frank Crowther, of New York, a minority member. "We haven't been told as much as the newspapers about

Woman Kills Her Husband With His Gun

Ex-State Trooper Is Shot to Death After a Gay Party.

Wade LeRoy Smith, 26, former Maryland State patrolman, was slain in his home in Laurel, Md., early yesterday morning with the same gun which, police say, he had but a moment before thrust into his wife's hands with instructions to kill herself.

Three hours after the shooting, Mrs. Smith, attractive 26-year-old brunette, stumbled into the State police sub-station in the race-track town. Sobbing and hysterical, she admitted firing the fatal shot after a quarrel.

Last night Mrs. Smith still was in police custody but no formal charge had been preferred against her. Police said none would be placed until a coroner's inquest, scheduled to be held before Justice of the Peace James L. Vawter in Laurel at 8 o'clock tonight.

The tragedy followed an evening spent at a carnival at Jessups, Md., at which Mrs. Smith had held reunion with the 4-year-old child of her former marriage. Police say they were unaware of exactly what happened after the couple left, apparently in a happy state of mind, except that three hours before she surrendered, neighbors had heard a single shot in the Smith home, which they had not bothered to investigate.

Fled After Shot.

When she appeared, in a dishevveled condition, at the sub-station, she was accompanied by her brother-in-law, Carroll Harrison, to whose home police said she had fled after the tragic ending of a night of gayety and beer drinking.

This, police said, was three hours after the shooting. They said that Carroll persuaded her to give herself up after appearing at his home.

Mrs. Smith, formerly the wife of Nuncy Greco, according to police, readily admitted the shooting. She pleaded that she did it in self-defense.

"He had been drinking beer," police quoted the distraught young woman as saying, "and we got into an argument.

"He handed me his gun and told me to shoot myself.

"I tried for about 20 minutes to get the gun to work so I could kill myself. Suddenly I saw him coming toward me. I don't remember what happened after that."

Married 18 Months.

Sergt. Ralph Brown of Prince Georges County police took Mrs. Smith to Hyattsville, where she was questioned for several hours. There, according to police, she said that her husband of 18 months had threatened to leave her and that previous to the tragedy he "was packing up to leave."

Police would not reveal, if they knew, the cause of the quarrel between the couple.

Probably the last to see the couple before the shooting were Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Greco, grandparents of her son and parents of her former husbatnd, who had obtained a divorce from her less than two years ago.

They had gone to the carnival with Mrs. Smith's small son, who had been in their care for some time. At the carnival he saw his mother and step-father. The Greco couple said they did not notice anything unusual about Mr. and Mrs. Smith at that time.

Neighbors denied having heard any loud or quarrelsome voices

New Deal Will Combat Re-Election of Borah

Copyright by the United Press.

The New Deal high command has decided finally to invade Idaho in the 1936 primaries to seek the scalp of Senator William E. Borah, Republican, part-time friend of the Administration and one of the best-known figures in public life, it was learned last night.

The decision was reached at a meeting of Democratic leaders here a few days before Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, left for a vacation in Honolulu. A Cabinet officer, it was reported, advised against such a move. He is said to have warned that it would precipitate another "Cutting incident."

Simultaneously with Farley's edict that Borah must go, Senate liberals began discussion of a counter-move. They still are smarting at the vigorous attempt made by the Administration in the last congressional campaign to defeat the late Senator Bronson Cutting (Republican), New Mexico. Their resentment flared openly when Dennis Chavez (Democrat), New Mexico, who contested Cutting's election was sworn in after Cutting's death in an airplane crash.

The little group, headed by Senators George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska; Robert LaFollette (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Borah, walked out of the chamber in a body and did not return until the ceremony was over. One liberal Democrat, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, already has volunteered to go into Idaho and campaign for Borah if his services are needed.

"I'll go into Idaho at the drop of the hat and do all I can to re-elect

SEC Sees Way Open to Revive Capital Issues

Renewal of Financing Is Seen as Result of Refundings.

By the Associated Press.

Large refunding operations in 1935 were shed by the Securities Commission yesterday to be "paving the way for new capital financing."

This optimistic outlook of the new capital market whose sluggishness has worried New Deal chieftains seeking to stimulate heavy industries was contained in an analysis of registrations in the first half of the year. The commission reported $665,000,000 in registrations which it said was "nearly double the amount for the first six months of last year."

Explaining how "the wave of refunding induced by easy money conditions" may help the capital financing market, the commission said:

"The first is by clearing up the high coupon callable bonds that are still outstanding. Only after these high-yield securities have been removed from the investment field and other indebtedness, bearing high interest rates, eliminated, is it usually possible to successfully undertake new financing at low enough interest rates to make new capital expenditures desirable and profitable.

"Again, the savings to companies affected their refunding operations, to the extent that they are placed to surplus, provide a source from which appreciable capital expenditures are normally made."

The commission noted that "whereas last year's issues were made up largely of the common stocks of investment trusts, this year's registered offerings have

England Plans Rebuilt Fleet, Paper Alleges

'Secret 7-Year Plan' Calls for $750,000,000 Budget, Editor Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 29 (Monday).—Great Britain plans to build almost a complete new battle fleet costing $750,000,000 by 1942, the Daily Herald said today in an article which it claimed revealed a secret seven-year plan developed by the admiralty.

Despite a statement in the House of Commons by Commander B. M. Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, declaring publication of the program would "be against the interests of the public and the peace of the world," the newspaper published what it described as "the admiralty's famous 'hush-hush' plan which already has been communicated to the admiralties of the United States, France, Germany, Italy and Japan.

The huge new schedule, the newspaper announced, calls for the construction of 12 new capital ships, and 33 cruisers.

The latteer item, it was said, fulfilled the dictum of Admiral Viscount John R. Jellico at the Geneva conference of 1927, when he asserted 70 cruisers were "the absolute requirement" for Britain to remain independent, regardless of the strength of other powers.

New U-Boats Planned.

In addition, the newspaper stated, there will be 63 new flotilla leader-destroyers, 21 new submramines and 3 new aircraft carriers.

Allowing for ships which become outdated under the Washington and London Treaty rules during the seven-year period, the paper says the comparative strength of the British fleet in "in date" ships between 1935 and 1942 will be as follows:

In 1935 15 capital ships, 50 cruisers, 84 flofitilla leader-destroyers, 39 submarines, 8 aircraft carirers; in 1942, 14 capital ships, 72 cruisers, 142 flotilla-leader destroyers, 57 submarines and 10 aircraft carriers.

The battle cruiser, H. M. S. Hood, although technically outdated in 1940, still will be serviceable in 1942.

The program, the Daily Hearld says, calls for the building of 3 cruisers, 9 flofitilla-leader destroyers and 3 submarines in 1936 with 5 capital ships, 5 cruisers, 9 destroyers, 3 submarines and 1 aircraft carirer in 1938.

Program Assailed.

The Daily Herald said editorially: "This great program is intensely discreditable to the government. It is discreditable because it is a direct sequel to the government's failure to accept, indeed, its success in blocking opportunities for naval disarmament, which in recent years was oered.

"It was Baldwin's government which wrecked the 1927 conference in Geneva by declaring through Jellicoe 70 cruisers were the 'absolute requirement' for Great Britain.

"When Italy proposed the abolition of capital ships in the early stages of the Disarmament Conference, Great Britain led the objectors. When the Americans proposed a reduction in the number of United States and British capital ships to 10, Sir John Simon objected.

"Naval disarmament was dead. The program we publish is the ugly fruit of that failure."

Second Crash Death Revives Coroner's Move to Close Road

As a result of the fatal accident at Queens Chapel and Bladensburg roads northeast early yesterday in which Virginia Donnally, 15, 1855 Wyoming avenue northwest, was killed, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald has renewed his recommendations that the Queens Chapel road be closed.

Miss Donnally was killed when the motorcycle on which she was riding with James Parker, 18, of 18 Seventh street southeast, collided with a car operated by John F. Boxwell, a precinct detective.

Boxwell said he was turning into Bladensburg road from Queens Chapel road and that he did not see the motorcycle. The motorcycle struck his car in the center, he said.

The Donnally girl and Parker were taken to the Casualty Hospital, where the girl died a short time later of a broken neck. Parker has a fractured right thigh and his condition is said to be serious.

Boxwell was released in the custody of his lieutenant to appear at the coroner's inquest.

A recommendation that Queens Chapel road be closed was sent to the Traffic Bureau by a coroner's jury after the death of Policeman Raymond V. Sinclair, who was killed at this corner while chasing a speeder on his motorcycle some months ago.

"The road is definitely a traffic hazard," Dr. MacDonald said yesterday. "The point where it enters Bladensburg road is at the crest of a hill and the boulevard at this point is more narrow than at any other. It could be closed until the proposed new bridge is built."

Miss Donnally's death is the sixty-sixth traffic fatality of the year and the first since the police traffic campaign was begun ten days ago.

Meanwhile, police continued their drive to rid city streets of death and injury by harassing violators of traffic regulations with arrests. Traffic Bureau officers and precinct men rounded up more than 100 violators before last night, bringing the total arrested during the last 36 hours to more than 350.

Arrests were made for violation of virtually every District traffic regulation.

The District's new auto financial responsibility law goes into effect after midnight Thursday. Intended to drive the reckless and irresponsible motorist from the city's streets, it provides for automatic suspension of the operator's permit and registration certificate and removal of the license tags of any motorist convicted of operating an automobile while drung or under the influence of narcotics; leaving the scene of an accident in which there has been a personal injury, without identifying himself; or fail-

Ethiopia Set For Renewed Arbitration

Stormy League Session Due Wednesday Over Italy's Demand.

Move to Limit Scope of Peace Commission to Be Opposed.

By the United Press.

Geneva, July 28.—A threatened crisis in the League of Nations Council was averted today when Ethiopia telegraphed willingness to resume arbitration negotiations with Italy.

The council, called to convene in emergency session Wednesday, had faced the most serious situation of its history. Premier Benito Mussolini personally telegraphed the secretariat, warning that the council must seek solely to revive arbitration or Italy would consider quitting the league.

Last week Italy notified the league of her willingness to resume conciliation, deadlocked by disagreement in negotiations at Scheveningen, Holland, on the basis of the council's June 25 resolution restricting discussion to frontier incidents and forbidding consideration of boundary disputes.

Ethiopia's offer to negotiate, matching Italy's, was communicated urgently to Il Duce in accordance with yesterday's promise of league Secretary-Gen. Joseph Avenol.

Italy Gains a Month.

Mussolini insisted upon Ethiopian acceptance of his own offer to negotiate before opening of the council sessions. With receipt of the Addis Ababa reply the council's task now is limited to approvnig resumption of arbitration, giving Italy at least another month in which to complete preparations for a military campaign in East Africa.

The agenda for Wednesday's council meeting contains one question:

"The dispute between Italy and Ethiopia."

The session was called at the request of Ethiopia.

Ethiopia's telegram expressing willingness to resume arbitration asks Italian participation in the council deliberations because in his communication Mussolini said:

"Italy will sit with the council if Ethiopia replies to our offer to resume conciliation."

Stormy Session Due.

The council session will be stormy. For the Ethiopian telegram rejects firmly Italian attempts to limit the arbitration powers of the commission—now composed of two Italian and two Ethiopian representatives.

Ethiopia denied Mussolini's statement that she ever agreed to restrict the commission's competence.

Ethiopia's telegram, addressed to Avenol, was signed by Foreign Minister Herrouy. It said:

"In reply to your telegram of July 27 convoking the League of Nations Council the imperial Ethiopian government confirms the request of its delegate for an emergency council session with a view to obtaining an interpretation of the mission of conciliation and arbitration.

"The Ethiopian government denies it ever agreed to limitation of the arbitrators' powers. It is for the council to decide between the respective contentions of the two groups of arbitrators. Replying to the Italian note requesting restriction of the arbitrators' mission the Ethiopian government maintains fully all the arguments its agents adopted."

By the United Press.

Rome, July 28.—With 10 ships loading war supplies and five Black Shirt divisions ready to sail for East Africa tonight, war between Italy and Ethiopia was regarded as inevitable despite the call for a League of Nations Council session Wednesday.

Diplomatic conversations between France, Britain and Italy achieved nothing.

Ethiopia's telegram to the league agreeing to Italy's offer of resumed conciliation efforts caused little interest in government circles. It was regarded as reiterating Ehiopia's previous viewpoint—a stand not acceptable to Italy because of insistence on discussing frontier boundaries.

One official interpreted the Ethiopian telegram as: "Serving only to involve greater wordage and con-

Caving Sands Foil Effort to Save Man Entombed in 22-Foot Well

By the Associated Press.

Mattituck, N. Y., July 28.—Rescue crews tonight reached the body of Richard Hojanicki, 44, entombed yesterday when a 22-foot well collapsed on him, but a new slide covered the body with 7 feet of sand after it was determined Hojanicki was dead.

New digging efforts were begun but the crews expressed little hope of recovering the body before morning.

Hojanicki was trapped yesterday afternoon as he was standing at the bottom of the well bricking up the retaining walls.

Suddenly the supports cracked, and tons of sand slithered over the helpless man. His son, Frank, 17, who was in the family's nearby summer cottage, heard the beams crack and ran out, spreading the alarm.

Firemen and neighbors immediately started digging with hand implements, but when they had sunk a wooden shaft 18 feet, it also collapsed. Three men in the rescue shaft narrowly escaped the fate of the man they were attempting to rescue.

After fruitless all-night digging, the machine was procured, but when it had sunk a shaft to within a few feet of the bottom of the well a cable broke, and operations were suspended until a new one could be brought.

Labor Urges U.S. To Boycott Nazis For Persecution

Assails Nazi Tactics

WILLIAM GREEN.

A. F. L. Assails Reich Regime for Treatment of Germans.

State Department Maintains Silence

Senator Plans Motion to Sever Relations With Hitler Rule.

The German Situation.

The American Federation of Labor, through President William Green, denounced the "horrible treatment" of Germans by the Nazi government and called for a boycott of Germany by all Americans. State Department officials maintained silence, pointing out that nothing official was before the Department in the disturbing situation.

Nazis charged an attempted Communist conspiracy with the Catholics. Feeling still ran high over the Bremen incident.

American Labor yesterday joined in the denunciatory cries against the Hitler government in Germany, while the resolution by Senator William H. King, of Utah, calling for a Senate investigation with a view to severance of relations with the Berlin regime.

The State Department, meanwhile, maintained silence, though it was known to be studying developments closely. Officials yesterday pointed out that there was nothing before the department, officially, in connection with the disturbing situation, and unless American citizens were discriminated against by the Nazis abroad or Berlin should send a formal protest against anti-Nazi activities here there was little likelihood of the department's acting.

It was emphasized that no formal notice has reached this country of the demand in the German press for an apology for the action of members of a New York mob who tore the Nazi flag from the North German Lloyd liner Bremen on Saturday. Nor was anything known officially of the Berlin "communique" holding that Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, in refusing a license to a German masseur had committed "a clear breach of the German-American friendship, commercial and consular treaty" of 1923.

"Shocked World."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement "regarding the 'blood purge' inaugurated by the Hitler government against the Jews and Catholics residing in Germany" called for a boycott of Germany by all Americans.

"The destruction of German trade-unions, the persecution of the Jews and the 'blood purge' inaugurated by the Hitler government shocked the entire world," his statement said. "Now all of this horrible treatment accorded residents of Germany is being supplemented by further drives against the Jews and Catholics residenting in Germany."

This all serves to vindicate the action of the American Federation of Labor in declaring a boycott against the German goods and German service. Every man and woman who loves liberty, freedom and justice must protest against the brutal action of Hitler and the Hitler government against free democratic trade unions, the Jewish people and German Catholics."

Says Rights at Stake.

Declaring many rights of individuals are at stake, the statement continued:

"In behalf of the American Federation of Labor, I repeat its official protest against the most recent action of the Hitler government. Surely the governing nations which make up the civilized world can not longer remain indifferent to the action of a tyrant such as Hitler, to his excelling in brutality and fiendish persecution the rulers of a bygone pagan age. The time has arrived when Germany ought to be boycotted, not only by labor and its friends, but by all the people of the United States. Furthermore, in the light of historical events it would appear that the hour has arrived when our government ought to take appropriate action which the exigencies of the situation demand, providing for a cessation of the brutal, inhuman treatment being perpetuated upon the laboring people, who wish to preserve their democratic trade unions in Germany, and upon Jewish people and the Catholics."

Nazis Charge Catholics Join Reds in Plot

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 28.—Nazis tonight charged an attempted Catholic-Communist conspiracy against the third Reich.

While the wave of anti-Semitism soared and drastic action against the Stahlhelm (war veterans) continued, officials announced the Munich police confiscated handbills revealing Communists proposed Catholics join them in joint anti-Nazi action.

"Let us unite to protect freedom of conscience, liberate imprisoned priests and fight against the Fascists," was the alleged red appeal.

Feeling Runs High.

The latest move against the war veterans came at Kassel, where the prefect banned meetings or wearing of uniforms by the Stahlhelm in the Schmalkalden District.

Meanwhile, news dispatches from the United States were scanned eagerly.

Nazis awaited developments in New York Mayor F. H. La Guardia's stand against licensing a German masseur on the ground Germany has discriminated against Americans. They applauded the official D. N. B. news agency's statement that La Guardia, in refusing to license Paul Kress, violated the German-American friendship-trade-consular treaty of 1923. The statement said the American Federal Government should force the mayor to respect the treaty.

Veteran Meeting Banned.

Feeling ran high over the Communist affront to the Nazi Swastika at the New York pier of the German Liner Bremen. The press continued to display the incident prominently, saying:

"Insults to the German colors must have a diplomatic sequel. The United States authorities must be expected to apologize."

Paul Joseph Goebbels, Reich propaganda minister, tonight cabled the crew of the Bremen his "admiration for your courageous resistance to attacks on the Reich flag by those who are equally cowardly in all countries and equally brutal when in the majority."

The anti-semitic campaign continued unabated, but was marked by rigorous Nazi Party efforts to control it.

Count Wolf Von Helldorf, new anti-Jewish president of the Berlin

Ruling for AAA Stresses Need For Showdown

Cummings Eager for Final Supreme Court Action on Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

The latest decision on the AAA, handed down by a Memphis district Federal judge, yesterday emphasized the Government's eagerness for a final ruling by the Supreme Court.

The Memphis ruling, made by John D. Martin and holding the AAA processing tax valid, provides the second test case for the high court. The first was an adverse ruling, made by a Boston Circuit Court judge.

Meanwhile, the Administration has been racing against court decisions with a bill to bulwark the AAA by itemizing the commodities to be taxed. The purpose of this is to meet the contention that the original act illegally delegated congressional power to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Cummings Presses Action.

The AAA bill, passed by both houses but in different forms, now is pending in a Senate-House conference committee.

Attorney General Cummings has contended injunctions could not be granted to restrain collection of the processing taxes and disclosed that his department was pressing for an early decision by the Supreme Court.

The most recent figures available in official circles here disclose that more than 440 suits are pending in courts of the country against the processing tax, many of them accompanied by injunction applications.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., July 28.—Processing taxes are legal under the welfare clause of the Constitution, District Federal Judge John D. Martin has ruled in upholding the validity of the agricultural adjustment act.

Judge Named Recently.

Martin, a life-long Democrat and president of the Southern Baseball Association, only recently was appointed to the Federal judgeship here by President Roosevelt.

The judge, in his oral decision late last night, took cognizance that "certain district judges have pronounced the act unconstitutional and the United States Court for the first district a two-to-one decision has so held," but that his court feels free despite such decisions "to pronounce independent views."

He held Congress has fixed the products to be taxed under the act, set up a scale of prices and therefore did not delegate taxing authority to the Secretary of Agriculture; that it was a tax and not a revenue measure.

Holds AAA "Necessary."

Judge Martin's decision dismissed a suit brought by Jacob G. Lacroix, Memphis packer, to recover $6,863 paid in processing taxes and denied an injunction to restrain the Government from collectnig a penalty of $1,267 for failure to file a return within the legal time limit. The case is to be appealed.

He reviewed the background of the enactment of the law.

"No more serious problem existed," the judge said, "than the predicament of the farmer. And so the agricultural ajustment act was born. It remained unchallenged so far as its constitutionality was concerned for many months until improvement in the agricultural situation was noted."

He said it was his opinion that "if any legislation has ever been necessary for the United States and the farmers, it was the AAA."

"Muscle Binding" Intent Denied.

"The general welfare clause of the Constitution," he asserted, "gives legality to such a processing) tax. The most serious question is whether the act is delegating a taxing power to the Secretary of Agriculture.

"Congress has set out products to be taxed and fixed the basis for such taxation rate. It is only left to the Secretary of Agriculture to follow the scale."

He said it was not the intention of the Constitution-makers "to muscle bind the country with extraneous phrases."

The packing company contended the processing tax on packers was not a tax but a revenue measure.

"The money is paid into the United States Treasury," Judge Martin said in reference to this question, "and no matter for what use it is earmarked, that alone makes it a tax."

Between You and Me

By Raymond Clapper

IN America we don't like what the Nazis are doing to the Jews in Germany. So in New York Mayor LaGuardia, with a large flourish, refuses a license to a German masseur . . . In Washington a Utah Senator talks about breaking relations and offers a resolution calling for a Senate investigation of the way Catholics and Jews are being treated in Germany . . . A New York mob of 2,000 swarms around the Bremen and members of the crowd board her and rip down the Nazi flag.

How would we feel if a gang of German rowdies boarded an American ship in Hamburg and tore down the American flag? Well, when the Mexicans did something equally outrageous we demanded an apology, and, failing to get it, sent the Navy down to occupy Vera Cruz. When the news of the American mob's mistreatment of the German flag reached Berlin the newspapers there, as might be expected, set up a demand for an apology from Washington.

Thus the silly season opens, with its touch of midsummer madness, when people want to burn down the barn to kill the rats, poison the family to kill the cockroaches, throw rocks from the top windows of their glass houses, when they've got ants in their pants.

This is not an advertisement, but the best reading now on the market for the silly season jitters is Walter Millis' book, "The Road to War." From that book you learn to what such things lead—and have led, only recently. You learn that a nation which does not mind its own business, which thinks that it can reform the world, which lets its justifiable indignation howl down its sober judgment, drifts toward war, slowly and imperceptibly at first, and floats unsuspecting on an emotional current which gradually rises in intensity until at last it becomes all powerful, sweeps away every obstacle and finally crashes over the falls in a headlong torrent.

No one can put the book down without feeling that in the presence of irritations beyond our own borders, it is important not only for statesmen, but for private individuals, to keep their shirts on.

Former Senator Dill of Washington is writing a book on government for the children. In it he is telling, in simple language, how the wheels go around in Washington, so that children can understand it.

Such a book is especially needed at this time when it is the duty of every child to aid its parents in better understanding their own government. When Senator Dill's book comes out it will be possible for every thoughtful child, who has the interest of its parents at heart, to bring mother and father together and place in their hands a simply written volume, which in plain, but discreet language will set forth the facts of life.

In Washington the tendency is to assume that adults are more precocious about such things than they really are. One Senator, quite eminent, had a rather disconcerting experience when he returned to his home city after an active session at Washington.

On the street he encountered an old acquaintance, one he regarded as among his more intelligent constituents.

"It's good to see you back," the constituent said, "How is everything down at the State capital?"

"I haven't been there for a long time," replied the crestfallen Senator. "Since I left the Legislature I seldom get down there."

"Oh, you aren't in the Legislature?"

"No, I've been at Washington several years."

"Well, how do you like being a Congressman anyway," asked the jovial constituent.

"I'm a Senator," the unappreciated statesman snapped and departed sorrowfully.

"And," he said later, "I always thought that fellow was one of the most intelligent men in the community."

A revealing questionnaire could be drawn up for voting parents. How many people know what happens to the pending bills which do not pass at this session of Congress? Nothing happens to them. Yet any number of business men now are trying to postpone tax legislation thinking that Congress would have to start all over again next winter.

Just for fun, correct the following statement, supposedly made by the nephew of that Texas Representative who claimed he received a box of cigars from the son of a utilities executive: "Hell, them wasn't cigars." Can Huey Long disciples correctly describe how the Kingfish makes a Ramos gin fizz? Or what prominent official is a faker? A liar?

As every Congressman's mail reveals, the care and feeding of voting adults is a job that can not be dismissed by giving them a new alphabet and $4,800,000,000.

Political Parade: New England Republicans, thinking of their 1936 shopping, are making inquiries about Gov. Landon of Kansas. They heard he was a second Coolidge . . . You don't suppose, do you, the Administration gave former Senator Tom Heflin that speaking job in the South with the idea that he would work on Talmadge and Huey Long in their own language? . . . Gov. Nice of Maryland isn't the same man he was before he made that trip to the Pacific Coast. They took him up on the mountain out there and discovered that he tempts easily. Now it seems to him only a running broad jump from Annapolis to the White House . . . The Administration's size-up of the political situation: Some surface wrinkles but sound underneath for Roosevelt . . . Some of the New Dealers hear that Senator Byrd wants the Virginia delegation to the next Democratic national convention, and not for complimentary purposes either . . . Twenty-seven Senators were absent when the banking bill was voted on. Some predict that in another two weeks there will be difficulty producing the 49 necessary for a quorum. Senators and Representatives are slipping away inconspicuously every day now . . . Talk about your gluttons the utilities companies have started a new barrage of letters and telegrams against the holding company bill. They want only real signatures this time . . . Dr. Rex Tugwell, moving quietly, is beginning to send publicity men out to field stations. He has discovered that the Washington spotlight is too blinding. Instead, it will be up to each field publicity man to brighten the corner where he is.

Probers Plan Hunt by Agents ToFind Hopson

Senate Committee Unable to Reach Utility Man Wanted on Stand.

By the Associated Press.

A possibility that Department of Justice men may be put on the trail of a missing power company executive arose yesterday after ten days of fruitless hunting by Senate lobby investigators.

H. C. Hopson, vice president of the Associated Gas & Electric Co.—the big holding unit which spent $700,000 to combat the Administration's utility bill—is the man wanted. J. I. Mange, chairman of A. G. E., is in a hospital and so unavailable.

If committee agents continue unsuccessful in their search for Hopson while Senators call lesser A. G. E. officials to the stand today, a committee member said the Justice Department will be asked to help.

It would not be the first time Federal men were sent out to find Hopson. Two years ago Ferdinand Pecora sought their aid in locating the holding company official during the Senate's stock-market inquiry.

Utility Men Summoned.

A. G. E. officials summoned to the stand today included O. E. Wasser, S. J. Magee, C. A. Dougherty, Fred S. Burrows and W. Partridge, jr.

Wasser is the man with whom U. E. Beach, head of the securities department at Erie, Pa., told the committee he talked before ordering the destruction of records in 26 States relating to the campaign against the abolition of "unnecessary" holding companies.

Senate investigators meanwhile quietly pursued the inquiry into the mysterious "box" which was carried from the hotel room of John W. Carpenter, Texas power company head, and which Representative Patton (Democrat), Texas, said contained cigars.

Patton vigorously denied he has anything to hide and has opened his personal accounts to the committee investigators.

Carl Estes, Longview (Tex.) newspaper publisher, said yesterday Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, of the Senate committee, had promised to permit him to deny, as did Carpenter, that Carpenter paid him for making a radio address against the holding company bill in Texas.

Texan Gets Hearing.

The publisher said Black asked him to appear at 10 a. m. today when the hearings are resumed. Estes, who declared in Texas he would like to "punch Black's nose for dragging my name into this," flew to Washington on Saturday.

While the lobby inquiry proceeded, there was no sign of a break in the deadlock between House and Senate conferees on the utility bill which started the investigation.

Three of the House conferees have refused to sit with the Senate as long as Ben Cohen, Administration aid, attends the negotiations. The Senate group insists upon its right to choose its own experts.

There were rumors the stalemate might result in defeat of the holding company bill. But informed Senators believed President Roosevelt would intervene before he would let the measure die.

Eccles Under Criticism.

The House Rules Committee planned to resume its utility inquiry tomorrow, Williams H. Collins, counsel for this group, said records taken from the office of Bernard B. Robinson, Chicago securities executive, would make the "best headlines thus far in the investigation."

The people's lobby yesterday made public a letter to Senator Black contending the lobby investigation "will be Hamlet with Hamlet left out unless you find out what stocks Federal officials and their families own."

The latter group quoted Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, as saying "I see no reason," for the resolution of Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, to require Federal employes to file with the Federal Trade Commission a statement of their stockholdings and corporation affiliations. It added:

"Governor Eccles with his vast and far-flung financial interests is, of course, an embryo Andy Mellon * * * While your committee is going so strong, won't you find out why Secretary Morgenthau is trying to get Peter Grimm, Vincent Astor's hired man, as advisor on real estate matters?"

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 28.—F. S. Burroughs, a senior vice president of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., has been seeking for more than a week to be heard by the Senate Committee on Lobbying, it was said in a statement tonight by the Associated company.

"Mr. Burroughs," the statement said, "is thoroughly familiar with the activities of the company and is fully informed regarding its opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn bill. He is especially well qualified to testify, due to the fact that he has been carrying the brunt of the business owing to Mr. Hopson's long absence from the office beginning last December and Mr. Mange's sickness which has recently led to his being confined to Johns Hopkins Hospital. Although it has been implied in the press that no senior officer of the Associated Gas and Electric Co. was available for testimony before the committee, Mr. Burroughs was informed on Friday by Senator Black that the committee would hear him on Monday, July 29, and he has advised Senator Black that he will be there."

U. S. Maps Aid For Teachers And Students

Youth Unit to Help 125,000 in Colleges; Instructors Will Get Courses.

By the Associated Press.

Federal help for both needful students and teachers was planned yesterday by the Works Progress Administration.

The twofold program:

1. Harry L. Hopkins decided to set up summer schools for 1,200 teachers who were among those who taught reading and writing to 500,000 illiterates last year.

2. Aubrey Williams, head of the National Youth Administration, said jobs would be provided 125,000 college students during the coming school year and announced that boy and girl leaders had indorsed his $50,000,000 program.

Meanwhile, following up appointment of Holger Cahill to direct painting and sculpture by needy artists, President Roosevelt allotted $530,784 of work relief funds for the decoration of Federal buildings. The program is expected to "employ several hundred artists and technical assistants for a period of about 13 months."

Dr. L. R. Alderman, who is serving with both the relief and the youth administrations, said 25 summer schools would be held for the teachers. The sessions will last six weeks and teachers attending will be paid from $15 to $18 a week in work relief wages. They will be trained for adult teaching this fall.

Alderman added he already had sent out field agents to aid in setting up courses at New York University, Ohio State University, Purdue University, Olivet College (Michigan), University of Wisconsin, University of Chicago, and University of California. The other training schools have not been selected.

The Youth Administration program for college students, an expansion of the Relief Administration activity which last year reached 104,673 students, provides for an average monthly wage of $15 for part-time "socially desirable" work to be provided by college authorities.

Favorable comment on the youth program, which also contemplates putting 65,000 children in camps and supplying apprentice work for others of the 500,000 scheduled for help, was received by Williams today from James E. West, chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America, and others. West wrote:

"Needless to say we here are delighted and heartened."

Mr. Roosevelt also allotted an additional $6,000,000 to the Fort Peck Dam in Montana, $2,500,000 to the Agriculture Department for control of the Dutch elm disease in 14 States, $200,000 for a flood-control survey by Army engineers of the Willamette River Valley in Oregon, $707,591 to New Jersey and $308,089 to Florida for Works Progress Administration projects and $140,000 to the Navy Department for administrative expenses.

Roper Refutes Peek; Calls U.S. Creditor Nation

Foreign Trade Official Had Held Devalued Dollar Altered Situation.

By the Associated Press.

New figures to show that the United States owes less money to foreigners than it is owed were offered yesterday by Secretary Roper.

In contrast to the view of George N. Peek, of the Export-Import Bank, who recently questioned the Nation's creditor position, the Commerce Secretary said in a foreword to his department's report on the balance of international payments in 1934:

"Despite substantial reparations of foreign dollar bonds in recent years, and numerous defaults, the long-term international creditor position of the United States is emphatically demonstrated by the fact that our annual receipts on investment account were approximately 3½ times the estimated interest and dividend payments by this country to residents of foreign countries on their investments in the United States."

Cites Difficulty.

On May 5 Peek reported to President Roosevelt that the Nation's creditor position "appears to depend" on the true value of defaulted war debts and out-of-date estimates of direct capital investments in foreign countries. The department's report foretold a "wide-scale survey."

Roper conceded that the "abnormal character" of many international transactions in 1934, due to dollar devaluation and political unsettlement in several European "gold bloc" countries, made it "exceedingly difficult to identify or appraise the various movements involved."

He said, however, that American funds which were expatriated in 1933 returned after the dollar was revalued, and that European unsettlement periodically influenced the expatriation of foreign capital to the United States.

Roper said he viewed these movements as "due to special influences which will tend to ocrrect themselves and not as indicators of a permanent trend in our international creditor-debtor position." His gauge — interest and dividends — showed that the country received $453,000,000 from abroad while paying out only $126,000,000.

The Commerce Secretary stressed that "while it is impossible to measure accurately the effect of the devaluation of the dollar upon our foreign trade, it is significant that the merchandise export balance of $478,000,000 was the largest since 1930.

"In actual value, the year's exports of $2,133,000,000 exceeded those of 1933 by 27 per cent, while on a quantity basis they were 8 per cent larger. Total imports valued at $1,655,000,000 were approximately the same on a quantity basis but were 14 per cent higher in value."

But Roper added that the net cash claims resulting from the export-import balance was "substantially offset" by $340,000,000 which accrued to foreign credit in tourist expenditures, shipping, insurance, governmental transactions and immigrant and other remittances.

The Nation imported a net total of $1,351,000,000 in gold, silver and foreign currency in the year, which Roper held was in part influenced by the merchandise export balance which was more than twice as large as in 1933.

After four consecutive years of heavy withdrawals of short-term banking funds, Roper reported a net inflow of $192,000,000 in 1934, while he said available data indicates that on long-term capital transactions the United States received $1,160,000,000 and made payments of $933,000,000.

Waterfront Peace Promised in N. Y.

Union Leader Says Action Will Be Orderly.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—While police mustered a reserve force of 1,000 men, Michael J. Cashal, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, announced today a "conservative, concerted" drive toward complete organization of the waterfront.

There will be no strikes, boycotts or disorder, Cashal said.

"Our only policy is to organize the unorganized."

Truck drivers who handle cargoes along the waterfront are now 85 per cent organized, he said, with 35,000 in the union ranks. The campaign for 100 per cent organization will start tomorrow.

The union's campaign is buttressed by a two-week-old court order, gained on appeal from an injunction that forbade interference with free movement of freight.

Roosevelt Is Back From Bay Cruise

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House last night from a week-end cruise on Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac.

He landed at the Washington Navy Yard and motored directly to the White House.

Accompanying him on the cruise were Comptroller General McCarl and Mrs. McCarl, Henry Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and his personal secretaries, Miss Marguerite Le Hand and Miss Grace Tulley.

The presence of McCarl gave rise to the belief that the President devoted some of the time to talking over the long-disputed points between the Comptroller General and Government agencies. Among the departments McCarl has differed with over expenditures is the Navy, represented on the cruise by the Assistant secretary.

Death and Taxes

Many business leaders see in the Administration's tax program, with its provisions for higher taxes on industry, threats to the economic life of the Nation. They regard the tax proposals as death sentences for American business.

What is the background of these tax proposals? Are they really necessary at this time? Are they necessary for business recovery . . . or will they retard that recovery?

Dr. Jules I. Bogen, professor of financ,e, New York University, answers these questions, and others regarding the Administration's tax program, in a series of six articles, the first of which will be found today on the Bank Opposes Rise in Taxes As Unjustified

Burden on Business Is Seen as Harmful to Unemployed.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—Proposed changes in the Federal taxation system were challenged today by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York as an unjustified burden on business.

"We oppose this new tax program, first of all, on the ground that its enactment would threaten the orderly and efficient operation of our present industrial system," it was stated in the Guaranty Survey published monthly. It continued:

"The inherent justice of 'share-the-wealth' programs is a question of social philosophy on which opinion will always differ.

"But the practical effects of such measures on the operation of our competitive industrial system constitute an economic problem in which some analysis is possible.

"Under such a system, the quest for profit is the mainspring of enterprise and material progress, and, without security of private property, profit is meaningless.

"The right to enjoy property and the right to transmit it are the two principal phases of that security.

"To the extent that these rights are curtailed, the influence of the profit motive is diminished.

"Taxes Confiscate."

"Income and estate taxes on very large aggregations of wealth already approach the point of complete confiscation, and a former Secretary of the Treasury has pointed out that the income tax rates existing in the past have been sufficient to drive capital from productive investments into tax-exempt securities and to reduce, rather than increase, the revenues received by the Government.

"How much further the process can go without disastrously weakening the incentive to the profitable investment of capital cannot be conclusively known except by experience. * * *"

The survey continued, "We oppose this Federal tax program on the additional ground that high estate and inheritance taxes tend to dissipate the aggregations of wealth on which industry depends for its capital and on which the Government depends for a substantial part of its revenue under the present income tax rates.

"Dry Up Source."

"To the extent that this dissipation takes place, the effect is to dry up a source of revenue and shift the tax burden to the lower income brackets, where it must inevitably fall in the end in any case."

The bank asked that the entire program be studied carefully and not rushed to completion.

The proposed graduated corporation tax, the bank said, was the least defensible recommendation in the entire program.

"Its adoption," declared the bank, "would mark a very definite step in economic retrogression."

Efficiency as a by-product of bigness in industry was claimed by the bank, and the survey continued:

"The problem of unemployment ultimately must be solved by private business; and punitive taxes will not speed the solution, but rather indirectly penalize the very group—the unemployed—that the Government declares it desires to help.

"It is by encouraging, not discouraging, large-scale industrial expansion that the Government can best help workers to recover their jobs."

New Deal Decides to Combat Sen. Borah's Reelection in '36

Senator Borah if he needs my help," Wheeler told the United Press.

Others in the group declined to comment publicly until the Administration opens its war against the venerable Idaho Republican. Borah, likewise, refused to comment.

Borah has gone along with the New Deal in its monetary, works relief, PWA and AAA program but fought the NRA bitterly after he acquired what he said was conclusive evidence that the recovery agency was inspiring monopolistic practices and crowding the little merchant out of the Nation's industrial and business life.

He supported Mr. Roosevelt's attack on utility holding companies but led the fight in the Senate against the Administration's movement to join the World Court. A noted constitutional lawyer, the Idaho Republican has been outspoken in many sharp criticisms on New Deal projects. The many years he headed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee made him an international figure.

Because of this prominence the Cabinet minister who opposed the proposed campaign against him cautioned that the move would arouse resentment throughout the Nation. If successful, the official argued, it would remove from the preponderantly Democratic Senate, the voice of one of the few remaining constructive critics.

Farley, however, it was said, remained adamant. Borah's Democratic opponent likely to receive Administration support is Ben Ross, 52, three times Governor of the State and former mayor of Pocatello, Idaho.

Ross, a former cowboy and farmer, who still is able to take part in bronco-busting and trick riding at county fairs, is a shrewd politician and an effective campaigner. In a State normally Republican by between 20,000 to 40,000, Ross ran 10,000 votes ahead of President Roosevelt in 1932 when he was re-elected Governor.

This plurality, however, was reduced in 1934 when he again was re-elected and he is reported to have lost part of his popularity by approving a sales tax adopted by the State Legislature. Some feel, however, that the sales levy will rebound to Ross' advantage by election time.

Meanwhile, reports to Democratic leaders here show that the New Deal isn't as popular in Idaho as it was a year ago. Republicans are counting upon this and perhaps further unpopularity to aid Borah's cause.

Water Election Set.

Charlottesville, Va., July 28.—The town council of Madison has received word that the State PWA offices have approved papers relating to an election August 6 to determine whether municipal water system is to be installed. It is estimated that the system will cost $30,000. The town seeks 45 per cent of this amount and expects to float a bond issue for the remainder.

police, sounded the keynote when, after consultation with party authorities, he warned against cooperation in any individual anti-semitic activities. Anti-Jewish acts must not discredit the party, he said.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 28.—The Reich press, commenting wrathfully today on the ripping of the Nazi flag from the German liner Bremen in New York Friday, attributed the outbreak to the pronouncements of the present Communists' council in Moscow.

While due notice was taken of the report from Washington that the United States Government has expressed regret over the incident through Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr, the editorials are still filled with resentment over what they consider an affront to the German flag.

Kreuz Zeitung characterized the Bremen incident as "the first fruits of the seventh Communist internationale." Germania, Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung and Morgenpost all emphasize that such treatment of a foreign liner would be absolutely impossible in any German port and that it just shows the world it need not excite itself over the treatment of Jews in Germany.

Antikomintern, the Association of German Anti-Bolshevist Societies' manifesto, says, "Germany is the only hope of the civilized world. Bolshevism considers that it holds the key position and that once Germany is conquered victory for Bolshevism is certain."

New Steps Planned Against Nazi Boats

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—Further demonstrations against German boats was planned today by an organization calling itself the "Anti-Nazi Federation."

The organization announced that a meeting had been called of "278 affiliated organizations" for Monday night to lay plans to "prevent the flying of the swastika" and "to cause the boycott of Nazi ships."

Nine persons are under arrest as the result of Friday night's disorders at the Bremen's pier when Nazi colors were torn from the boat. Two are in hospitals, one with a bullet wound.

The new demonstrations, said a statement from the federation, will "serve to highlight the fact that prominent American citizens are patronizing the Nazi shipping lines despite the violation of the rights of American citizens in Germany and the outrageous attack upon their religious brethren."

Both the riot and Mayor LaGuardia's refusal of a masseur's license to a German alien have drawn protest from the German press.

The statement said the Bremen trouble was not a riot, but a "magnificent example of the courageous will of the American people to combat the barbarism of the Hitler regime."

The mayor refused the masseur's license application on the ground that Nazi treatment of American Jews had abrogated a reciprocal commercial pact of 1925.

Mendieta Confers With Head of Army

Breach With Col. Batista Is Apparently Healed.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, July 28.—President Carlos Mendieta today received Col. Fulgencio Batista, commander in chief of the army, with whom he was reported at odds over the arrest of 36 public works employes on sedition charges.

Antonio Beruff Mendieta, secretary of commerce and nephew of the president, said the president and Batista discussed problems concerning the government's general political situation.

The breach betwen the president and Batista was widened by the army's activities in the round-up of the 36 prisoners, one of whom is Mendieta's good friend, Francisco Diaz, undersecretary of the department of public works.

The prisoners are accused of being members of the "Black Eagle," Cuba's newest secret society, said to have for its purpose "suppression of the war and navy departments."

In the seizure army and secret service men are convinced that they have frustrated a plot against the government.

sequent confusion of the issue."

Premier Benito Mussolini, 52 tomorrow, will spend the day at Riccione on the seashore. Tomorrow King Victor Emmanuel will observe the thirty-fifth anniversary of his accession to the throne, spending the day quietly with members of his immediate family. The King has reigned longer than any other European ruler. He has ten years seniority over King George of England. He was a sovereign when Italy fought her last colonial war—with Turkey in Lybia in 1912.

Addis Ababa, July 28.—For the second time within a week the women of Ethiopia staged a huge patriotic demonstration in the main square of the city today.

Relays of speakers, under the supervision of 1,000 women who formed the demonstration, harangued crowds, urging the support of Emperor Haile Selassie in appealing for assistance of the Red Cross.

The native press took advantage of an opportunity to praise British justice and to lash out at the Italian Government.

Praise was given to Great Britain for its attitude in the Italo-Ethiopean dispute, with especial reference to its treatment of reports in the Italian press over supposed incidents in which some British troops were killed in a clash with Ethiopians.

The British foreign office officially denied a Stefani (Italian) news agency dispatch that three British Somalis were killed last June in a "bloody encounter" between Ethiopian soldiers and British native troops. The foreign office said the incident occurred three years ago and now was in the course of settlement.

The native press, describing the information as "false" and an invented communique, accused the Italian press of continuous harmful propaganda.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, July 28.—The Pope expressed the hope today that peace would prevail in East Africa. His reference to the Italio-Ethiopian controversy was made in the course of a pronouncement commemorating "the historic virtues" of Justin de Jacobis, apostolic vicar of Ethiopia who died in 1860.

"We recall the memory of this great Italian, of this great Ethiopian by adoption, we might add, at a moment when the sky between Italy and Ethiopia is darkened by clouds, which—or better to say, mystery—the presence and significance of can escape no one," said the pontiff.

"* * * We shall always hope for the peace of Christ in the Kingdom of Christ and that whatever may come to pass, we have every confidence that nothing will occur which will not be in accordance with truth, justice and charity."

Tinkham Asks Neutrality Law To Restrict U.S.

Charges Roosevelt Link to Britain in Stand on Arms Traffic.

By the Associated Press.

A charge that the President and State Department are dominated by the British foreign office was coupled yesterday by Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, with a demand for neutrality legislation.

"Both the President and the Department of State, dominated and controlled by the British foreign office," he said in a statement, "are opposed to legislation providing for strict neutrality of the United States in the next war, a war which is already beginning to loom on the European horizon."

Arms Bill Approved.

Tinkham said the House Foreign Affairs Committee recently approved a bill providing for the assembling of statistical information on the arms traffic.

But he contended the President, through the State Department, opposed an amendment to bar arms exports to any country engaged in a war to which the United States was not a party. The amendment, he said, would have meant "strict neutrality" for this country.

"The British foreign office," Tinkham said, "is opposed to such legislation by the United States.

"Such legislation would prevent Great Britain from using the United States as an arsenal for her war supplies in the next war, as was the case in 1914-1918, and also would tend to prevent Great Britain from again involving the United States in war for her purposes," he said.

Will Introduce Measure.

Promising introduction of such arms effort legislation today, Tinkham said it should be enacted "if the interests of the United States are to be given first consideration instead of the desires of the British foreign office."

Tinkham said British foreign office control of the President and State Department was shown among other things by Mr. Roosevelt's declarations about the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, following a call of the British Ambassador at the State Department, which "synchronized with declarations of British policies in the House of Commons."

Man Killed in Dive; 2d Exposition Victim

San Diego, Calif., July 28 (AP).—Southern California's second death in two days from stunts designed to thrill spectators was recorded today. Roy "Spider" Haines, 45, was the victim.

Haines died last night from injuries received in a 90-foot tower dive into a shallow pool on the exposition amusement zone here.

Friday, William C. Miller, 24, died at Ocean Park in a "human cannonball" stunt which tossed him into the ocean from a pier device operated by compressed air.

Witnesses who saw Haines' dive said the pool was not lighted very brightly and that he struck the water with his chest instead of plunging in head first.

Boy, 4, Will Quit Smoking, Drinking

By the Associated Press.

West Paterson, N. J., July 28.—Charles "Mickey" Norman 3d, who was 4 years old today, has practically given up drinking and smoking.

Mickey now likes cake and ice cream almost as much as cigarettes, stogies, corncob pipes, beer and hard liquor. Time was when he preferred tobacco and alcohol to sweetmeats but that was when Mickey was younger—only 3 in fact.

A year ago on his third birthday Mickey had his picture taken smoking a big cigar. The picture appeared in all the papers. Letters engulfed the Norman home from anti-tobacco leagues and reform leaders all over the country.

Then Mickey's grandmother, Mrs. Charles Norman, took a hand. Mickey began to taper off and now, Mrs. Norman says proudly, smokes only on weekends and special occasions and hardly drinks at all.

Browder Cites Red Gains in America

Predicts Stronger Party in United States.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 28.—Earl Browder, the general secretary of the American Communist Party, drew prolonged applause today when he told the Seventh Communist Internationale that the party was growing steadily stronger in America and that especially the number of Negro Communists had been greatly increased.

He attributed the frequency of strikes to what he called the growing discontent of the workers there.

"Right wing opportunists are being eliminated from the party in the United States," he said. "Followers of Leon Trotzky (exiled by the Soviet) are being driven from the party."

William Pieck, German delegate, delivering the general report to the congress, fixed as the principal task of the American Communists the formulation of a coalition of workers' organizations. This is needed, he pointed out, to creat a united workers' party in the United States.

Another German delegate, Comrade Frantz, charged that Nazis tortured 3,000 workers to death in Germany.

Attorneys General Act For Clearing House

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—A clearing house of legal opinions for the attorneys general of the 48 States will be established here this autumn, Henry W. Toll announced today in behalf of the National Association of Attorneys General.

The secretariat, Toll said, will aid in untangling legal conflicts between the States and their residents, and probably distribute information on legal aspects of regional compacts and interstate agreements on crime control, parole and probation.

Toll said the clearing house was suggested two months ago at a regional meeting of the National Association in Hartford, Conn.

Austria Talks Of Restoration On War Date

21 Years Ago the Emperor Moved His Armies Against Serbia.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 28.—The twenty-first anniversary of the Austro-Hungarian declaration of war on Serbia, the fateful decision which touched off the World War, today found Austria talking about the same old of the monarchy could be heard

Rumors of a possible restoration of the Monarchy could be heard throughout the city.

Unsubstaniated reports, given credence in some quarters, said legitimists had about reached a definite decision that the only means of restoring the monarchy is a coup d'etat which must be attempted soon.

Little attention was given in Austria to the anniversary itself, but a few editorial references in the Vienna press recalled the fact that Emperor Francis Joseph took a prominent part in what at the time seemed an insignificant quarrel with Serbia.

The Emperor declared war when his ultimatum demanding satisfaction from Serbia for the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand at Sarajevo, June 28, 1914, went unanswered.

The announcement of the declaration of war July 28, 1914, was received with demonstrations of great enthusiasm throughout the dual monarchy.

First skirmishes in the hostilities and the first deaths were reported that very day, after Austro-Hungarian troops near Belgrade began to move.

That evening a Serbian soldier was shot while steering a boat on the Danube at a little gypsy island. He was the first of an estimated 8,500,000 to die in the World War. His grave, however, was never marked as his body was carried off by the stream.

Woman Facing Arraignment In Torso Death

Fugitive Held in New York Will Be Returned to Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—The promptness with which Mrs. Evelyn B. Smith, a slim, bespectacled woman of 46, will be returned to Chicago to face a charge that she was party to a $500 murder contract, depended upon her arraignment tomorrow.

Procedure outlined by Brooklyn police, who are holding Mrs. Smith, however, called for her appearance in Manhattan's police lineup tomorrow and arraignment later, on a fugitive-from-justice charge.

Mrs. Smith, who denied any complicity in the killing of Ervin Lang, 28-year-old grocery clerk, meanwhile faced a grilling by Lieut. Otto Erlanson and Sergt. Roy Arnold, of the Chicago police.

She was found by detectives in a rooming house yesterday after a search that started early this month when she was accused by Mrs. Blanche Dunkel of complicity in the slaying of Mrs. Dunkel's son-in-law.

Mrs. Dunkel was quoted as saying Mrs. Smith promised to "get rid of" Lang for $500. Lang's body, from which the legs had been cut, was found by berry pickers in a swamp near Hammond, Ind., July 9.

Mrs. Smith said she knew Mrs. Dunkel but denied any connection with the death plot. She said she was surprised to know police were hunting her and expressed willingness to return to Chicago.

"I have nothing to fear," she said.

Mrs. Dunkel, in Chicago, identified the alleged fugitive from a photograph and reasserted the New York prisoner was the woman she paid to kill Lang.

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Assistant State's Attorney Charles Dougherty tonight predicted the "torso murder" of Ervin Lang would be solved after a meeting of the two women suspects—Mrs. Blanche Dunkel and Mrs. Evelyn Smith.

Dougherty reported that Mrs. Dunkel flew into a rage when he told her Mrs. Smith had hinted she had poisoned her daughter, Mallie Lang's wife, who died last year.

"If she said I had anything to do with killing Mallie, she is a liar," Dougherty quoted Mrs. Dunkel as saying. "She is lying if she says she did not kill Ervin Lang."

Tavern Shooting Fatal To Chicago Man, 29

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Jack Holbrook, 29-year-old employe of the Daily Times circulation department, was fatally wounded in a West Side tavern early today.

His body, a bullet wound under the heart, was found on the grounds of the Cook County Hospital.

Thomas Ketcham, a friend of the victim, told Capt. William Schoemaker he had driven Holbrook from the tavern to the hospital, but left him on the lawn when he ascertained he was dead.

Authorities were unable to learn who fired the shot. They quoted James Allegretti, the tavern keeper, as saying Holbrook had a pistol when he entered the place and that both Ketcham and Holbrook had possession of the weapon shortly before the shooting occurred. Ketcham told the captain he and Holbrook were standing at the bar when he heard the shot and his companion slumped to the floor. Ketcham denied he had handled the revolver.

Lumber Ship Aground In Narragansett Bay

Portsmouth, R. I., July 28 (AP).—The freighter Steelmaker, from Pacific Coast ports with 2,000,000 feet of lumber, went aground early today on a sand bar in Narragansett Bay. Efforts were to be made tonight to float her with the high tide.

Revenge Seen Kidnap Motive In Idaho Case

Mysterious Sedan, Note Linked With Child's Disappearance.

By the Associated Press.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, July 28.—Officers, stirred by the rise of a possible "revenge kidnaping" motive, hunted today for a mysterious blue sedan as the key to the disappearance of 2-year-old Bobby Rush a week ago.

Deputy sheriffs linked the reckless speed of the vehicle over Sage Creek country roads with an unsigned note, scribbled on a postcard, which changed the aspect of the missing baby case last night.

"Your baby is O. K. Don't worry."

That was the message that came to the parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rush, of Athol, Idaho. It had been mailed on a train between Spokane, Wash., and Pendleton, Oreg.

Hunted for Week.

It turned the sheriff's force definitely on the trail of abductors, Deputy H. H. Haner declared, after a futile week-long hunt in the Sage Creek country, where the fair-haired Bobby disappeared at a picnic with a dozen other children last Sunday.

The case, if a kidnaping, offers baffling angles.

Mr. Rush, her voice firm, despite a week of anguish, said the family had been on relief for two years. A ransom motive, she said, would be out of the question.

"And I don't know of any enemy who would want to steal one of our four children," she added.

Note Baffles.

But Deputy Haner reported officers believed the note definitely indicated a "revenge kidnaping." Why, he would not say.

"I can't even say that any particular person is under suspicion," he declared. "The blue sedan looks like the key to the whole situation. We think we can find it."

Bobby's companions at the picnic did not see the car. Others reported sighting it about the time he vanished.

A spiritual medium injected another strange angle.

Mrs. Rush said she had just returned from the medium's home when she found the message at the Athol postoffice. She said the medium had told her and her husband they would receive two letters and that a blue car figured in the case.

Rat Bites Children, Attacks Rescuer

Detroit Father Wrecks His Kitchen Killing Rodent.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 28.—A large gray rat which invaded the home of Richard Vincent today inflicted wounds on three sleeping children and attacked Vincent when he attempted to kill it, he reported to police.

The three children, Ilene, 18 years old; Richard, jr., 14, and Wesley, 12, were ordered to a hospital for treatment by health department officials. Ilene was bitten in the shoulder and the two boys were bitten about the arms and hands as they sought to fight the rat off.

"I never saw such a thing in my life," Vincent told police. "Big and wild! I hit him a solid wallop, but he just rolled over and then came at me. I kept swinging with a broom and wrecked most of the kitchen before I killed him."

The health officer who investigated said an examination of the rat would be made to determine if it was suffering from rabies.

Four 'Clever' Fakers Of Money Are Nabbed

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Capt. Thomas J. Callaghan, of the United States Secret Service, today announced arrest of four members of a band of "exceptionally clever" counterfeiters. He said $5,000 in spurious $20 bills also was seized.

The captain identified the prisoners as Philip Denman or Denmore, Leo Trant, "Whitey" Newman and a fourth man whose name was not disclosed. They were rounded up, Callaghan said, after a number of the bogus bills had been passed at race tracks and on the North Side.

15 Homes Destroyed By Fire in Santiago

Santiago, Cuba, July 28. (AP).—Fifteen houses and a Catholic church were destroyed by a fire which swept a large section of the coast town of Baracoa early today. It was the third serious fire in three months.

On July 10 the people fought all day with salt water bucket brigades in an effort to extinguish flames which destroyed 20 buildings. Later the populace paraded the streets demanding adequate fire-fighting equipment.

Three months previously a fire destroyed docks, stores and homes.

Freighter Is Stranded On Fiji Island Shoals

Suva, Fiji Islands, July 28 (AP).—The Norwegian freighter Hoegh Trader, which ran aground on Horseshoe Shoals yesterday, was stranded at low tide today and could not be moved.

The English ship Noumea was standing by.

The Hoegh Trader, a vessel of 2,865 tons net, struck the shoals at a speed of 11 knots.

Extent of damage cannot be learned until the forward holds are cleared of cargo, but no attempt has been made to tow the vessel free for fear it might sink.

Thompson Case Likely to Close Early in Week

Defense Indicates Plea Will Rest on 'Sexual Mania' Theory in Attack.

By the United Press.

Peoria, Ill., July 28 (U.P.).—Gerald Thompson will know his fate this week, it appeared tonight.

State's Attorney E. V. Champion expected to complete the State's case against the confessed slayer of auburn-haired Mildred Hallmark, 19-year-old cafe hostess, by Tuesday, perhaps by tomorrow night.

Ren Thurman, State-appointed defense counsel, was less definite.

"I may present two or 50 witnesses," he said. He intimated the defense would rest on an insanity plea although he did not expect to call alienists.

When the trial opened a week ago, Thurman indicated in a motion for delay that he would call Mrs. Florence Whiteside, Thompson's mother, as a witness to establish her son's insanity, that he was a sexual monomaniac.

Confession Admitted.

Later, Thurman's cross-examination showed he might seek to prove the Hallmark girl died accidentally of a fall into the ditch where her ravished body was found.

But it was believed this theory was abandoned yesterday when Circuit Judge Thomas E. Daily admitted the curly-haired defendant's confession after Thompson went to the witness stand in the absence of the jury in a futile attempt to prove the confession was extorted by threats and starvation.

The confession showed Thompson slew Mildred when she bit his thumb in resisting his advances. This blow, the State contends, broke her neck. Since it occurred in the commission of a felony, the crime is punishable by electrocution.

Brother in Same Jail.

Thompson's mother is a patient at Proctor Hospital, where she was taken shortly before the trial began, victim of a "nervous breakdown."

In the same jail with Thompson is his brother, held on a statutory charge involving a small boy. Thompson's father, Gibbs Bowers, who married Mrs. Whiteside when she was 14, disappeared after the birth of their second son. Grandparents with whom Thompson lived since his second year never have appeared at the trial.

If Mrs. Whiteside is able to testify, Judge Daily ruled, she may not voice conclusions that her husband was a "psychopathic personality" and that Victor Thompson is similarly mad.

Jailers reported that Thompson seems to have given up hope. He was morose and scarcely touched his meals. Previously he has been a jaunty, defiant figure, but today the wheezy mouth organ with which he has whiled away the dreary hours in his cell lay untouched on his cot.

Socialite Pair Loses Gems Worth $15,000

Chicago, July 28 (AP).—Mr. and Mrs. Denis E. Sullivan, jr.—he is the son of the chief justice of the Criminal Court and she is the granddaughter of the late William Wrigley, jr.—were robbed of $15,000 in jewels by three gunmen early today.

The Sullivans were halted while driving to their Lake Shore drive home. Pistols were placed against them. Mrs. Sullivan, the former Betty Offield, known as one of the wealthiest women in Chicago society, gave up her wedding and engagement rings and four other rings, one of which she valued at $10,000. Her husband estimated his loss at $1,200 in jewelry.

Holland Seeks Premier To Protect the Guilder

The Hague, the Netherlands, July 28 (AP).—Two names were mentioned today for the premiership as Queen Wilhelmina continued conferences over the week-end in an effort to re-form the government successfully for its fight against devaluation of the guilder.

Jonkheer de Geer, leader of the Christian Historical Party, was mentioned as a possibility, while other informed sources believed the Queen would hand the office back to former Premier Hondryk Colijn.

Drivers' Responsibility Ruling Explained by Motor Club Aid

Richard M. Ham Discusses New Act Requiring Posting of Financial Surety Which Goes Into Effect Here Friday.

The new financial responsibility act and its effect on Washington drivers was discussed last night on the Postilion radio program by Richard M. Ham, director of safety of the District Motor Club. As the act goes into effect on Friday morning, The Post prints Mr. Ham's remarks for the benefit of those who may not have heard this broadcast. The Postilion program was conducted over Station WMAL of the National Broadcasting Co. at 10 p. m. Mr. Ham spoke as follows:

Over the week-end the A. A. A. District of Columbia Motor Club has been deluged with calls from members and from other motorists in regard to the new financial responsibility act which goes into effect one minute after 12 o'clock next Friday morning.

These calls indicate that there is a great deal of misunderstanding in regard to the law. With the zero hour so near, it is of vital importance that you should understand how the law will work to affect you and your family.

Let me give you a simple illustration. Suppose I am driving to my home next Friday morning and become involved in an accident causing injury to a person or property, and a court finds me legally responsible and assesses damages against me of an amount over $100. The Court will give me exactly 30 days in which to pay judgment, and in the event I fail to pay my operator's permit is suspended and revoked and license plates on all my cars will be recalled and I cannot drive or have a car registered in my name for a period of three years.

And, even if I do pay, the law further will compel me to establish my financial responsibility for the future through the posting of a policy of liability insurance, or a bond, or the equivalent of the insurance or the bond in cash. Such responsibility must be maintained for a period of not less than three years.

Failure to pay a judgment found against you is not the only cause which will bring you within the provisions of this legislation. There are serious violations of driving regulations which will expose you to all of the penalties of this law. Your license tags and permits will be subject to revocation and suspension if you are arrested after Friday morning for reckless driving or for leaving the scene of an accident in which your car was involved; and it would be necessary for you to establish your financial responsibility for the future as a condition of continuing to drive on the streets of the District of Columbia.

Just to prove to you that this warning of the possible loss of your right to drive is not an empty threat or an idle gesture, let me tell you what has happened in three jurisdictions where safety responsibility is in effect. Let me read you a telegram we received today from our New York State Automobile Association at Albany. "In 1934, 8,436 motorists were ruled off the highways of New York under our safety responsibility law."

And here is a telegram from our A. A. A. club at Trenton, N. J.: "In 1934, 6,683 New Jersey motorists were ruled off our highways under safety responsibility law." And in adjoining Maryland, 3,763 motorists had their drivers' permits revoked and suspended.

From the frequency of inquiries addressed to us, it would seem that a great many motorists think that the new law provides for compulsory insurance on the part of all motorists. It should be clearly understood that there is nothing compulsory about this law. You are not compelled to do anything. The law merely says that if you should, through your own carelessness or heedlessness or failure to provide yourself with financial protection, have an accident involving damage to the person or property of others in an amount over $100, or you have committed a violation of important driving rules, you will become subject to serious liabilities.

One of the questions we get every day simply asks "What should a motorist do?" The American Automobile Association advocated this law in the interest of public safety eight years ago and the first advice we give and the most important from our standpoint is that "Every man and woman who drives a car should drive with the utmost care." The careful and law-abiding driver has nothing to fear from this law. On the other hand, experience has demonstrated time and again that even the careful driver may some time be the cause of an accident involving injury to others and for this reason it is ordinary common sense that those who are able to provide liability protection for themselves should consider the wisdom of doing so at this time.

Manifestly, I have been able to give you only the high lights of the provisions and penalties of this law at this time. You should be informed as to all the details for your guidance and protection.

If you wish additional information, write the District of Columbia Club of the A. A. A., Pennsylvania avenue at Seventeenth street northwest, or phone Metropolitan 4000, or address this station, and a copy of a pamphlet explaining the law will be sent to you without charge.

8,000 Attend Mooney Rally In California

Labor Leader Tells Throng Prisoner Was Victim of a Frame-Up.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 28.—Defenders of Tom Mooney rallied at a mass meeting here today on the nineteenth anniversary of his imprisonment and shouted approval when speakers described him as a martyr to the cause of organized labor.

The throng at the civic auditorium, estimated by officials at the doors at 8,000 persons, cheered Harry Bridges, militant San Francisco longshoreman, when he charged that Mooney was convicted through a "frame up" of the 1916 preparedness day bombing here.

Bridges, who walked unknown from the docks a year ago to spur labor into a general strike in San Francisco Bay cities, declared that other workers were in peril at present from similar "frame ups" throughout the country.

Claims Workers 'Framed.'

He cited the case of eight San Francisco marine workers on trial at Modesto, Calif., on a charge of plotting to dynamite Standard Oil Co. property during the recent Pacific Coast oil tank ship strike.

"They are being framed, just like Mooney was," Bridges charged.

Bridges extended his remarks to include what he said were the efforts today of employers, as represented by "big business," to crush the labor movement. He urged organization of a labor party to break what he said was the political control of big employers.

Mooney Speaks to Groups.

Mooney, though across the bay in San Quentin Prison under a life sentence, spoke to the meeting through the medium of talking motion pictures. The picture, a review of his case, was taken some time ago and has been shown throughout the country.

Other speakers included the Rev. Gross W. Alexander, of Idaho, secretary of the inter-religious committee for justice for Tom Mooney; Kanju Kato, chairman of the National Trade Union Congress of Japan, and Leo Gallagher, internationally known attorney.

Telegrams advocating freedom for Mooney, which the Mooney moulders' defense committee said were from Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota, Theodore Dreiser, the author; Senator Gerald P. Nye, of South Dakota, and James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, were read.

Jailed in 1916.

Mooney, who had been active in the labor movement during a series of strikes, was jailed here July 28, 1916, six days after a bomb exploded during a preparedness day parade on Market street, killing 10 persons and injuring 40 others. He and Warren K. Billings, young machinist, now serving a life term in Folsom Prison, were convicted.

Mooney's latest bid for freedom, a habeas corpus action suggested early this year by the United States Supreme Court when it refused to consider his case at the time, is now before the California Supreme Court.

The State court, which has set a hearing for September 3, is expected to announce a decision tomorrow on an application for immediate appointment of a commissioner to take depositions of four witnesses. The State resisted the application, contending the depositions should not be taken until after the hearing starts.

emanating from the trim, brown cottage on Fourth street, where the automobile salesman and his wife lived. They admitted hearing the shot, but it was not until after police arrived to find the body of Smith lying on the living room floor that they learned of the tragedy.

Sergeant Albert Markley and Corporal C. W. Cubbage, to whom Mrs. Smith made her surrender, were former fellow officers of the dead man. To them she gave the revolver from which the fatal shot was fired.

Died Instantly.

The bullet had drilled Smith directly through the heart. Dr. B. T. Towner, called by police, said that Smith had died instantaneously.

Smith, a former soldier, had resigned from the State police force at the request of his wife after a colorful career. At that time he had been transferred to the region of Randallstown. Mrs. Smith wanted to live in Laurel, police said, and so her husband gave up his police career and became an automobile salesman in order to gratify her wishes.

Eighteen months ago, according to police, she had divorced Nuncy Greco and married Smith the next day. She was formerly Miss Dorothy Dodd, of Laurel.

Smith, police were unanimous in saying, had enjoyed an enviable record while on the police force. Served several years. He was one of the force sent to the Eastern Shore during the lynching riots of December, 1933.

Later he was one of 12 State patrolmen sent to quell the "oyster pirates" in the Potomac River oyster war off Pope's Creek, Md. Placed aboard one of the "pirate" boats to guard prisoners, he was rushed by the men and forced to shoot one through the shoulder before he could quell the uprising.

Smith also was an aviation enthusiast, with several solo hours of flying to his credit. He was widely known and liked throughout Maryland, especially in the region between Washington and Baltimore. Most of his police career had been spent in the Laurel sub-station.

Smith was a native of Hagerstown, Md. His parents now live in Cumberland, and the body will be taken there for burial.

Cumberland Mother Awaits Smith's Body

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 28.—The body of Wade LeRoy Smith, former member of the Maryland State police, shot by his wife at Laurel, Md., will be taken to the home of his mother, Mrs. Minnie M. Smith, wife of William M. Smith, 419 Winmer street, tomorrow and the funeral probably will be held Tuesday.

Smith, a native of Hagerstown, Md., a son of Charles Newton Lum by Mrs. Smith's first marriage, took the name of his stepfather when his mother remarried. The stepfather is a carpenter in the employ of the Western Maryland Railway. Smith also is survived by a brother, Charles L. Smith.

Smith learned the trade of molder at the McKaig foundry here. He later served a year in the United States Army in Texas, according to his mother. When a resident of Cumberland he was active in company G, First Maryland National Guard. He joined the State police in 1931, serving until last year.

Mrs. Smith stated today that her son and his wife had never got along well since their marriage.

D. C. Folklore Authority to Aid White Top Mountain Festival

R. W. Gordon to Address Gathering at Marion on Aug. 15.

R. W. Gordon, well known Washington writer and authority on folklore, has been assigned a prominent part in the fifth annual White Top Folk Festival to be held on White Top Mountain near Marion in southwestern Virginia, August 16 and 17.

According to an announcement yesterday from the National Federation of Music Clubs, Gordon also will participate in the White Top Folk Conference to be held in Marion August 15, addressing the conference on folk balladry. During the festival he will assist in judging contests.

From Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Kentucky and West Virginia, into which White Top's summit affords a view, and from perhaps a half dozen other States folk musicians are expected this year to come to sing the traditional music of their forefathers, and to enter contests in ballad singing, fiddle, banjo, folk hymns, mountain bands and country dances. Nine States were represented at the festival last year and registrations this year are from States as far West as Akansas.

The festival is intended by its originators as a permanent contribution to American art and culture. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has shown considerable interest in it. She attended the 1933 festival and conference and personally assisted with the folk research work begun through the festival.

John Powell, Virginia composer-pianist, has been engaged to play a recital in Wytheville on the evening of August 14. The Southeastern Folklore Society will hold its opening business session at Marion on the afternoon of August 14 and the Barter Theater of Abington, Va., will give the premiere performance of a folk play, "The Hill Between," by Lula Vollmer, in Marion on the following evening.

The conference will include speakers on folk music, balladry, drama and folk arts. Mr. Powell and the authors, Phillips Barry, of Massachusetts, and Reed Smith, of South Carolina, will be among those addressing the conference.

Mrs. John P. Buchanan, of Marion, is director of the festival.

Nye Will Lead Move to Collect On Cuban Issue

Group Avers Morgan Deal Discriminates Against U. S. Public Holders.

By the Associated Press.

New efforts to adjust defaulted interest on $40,000,000 of Cuban public works bonds held by Amercians were forecast yesterday with the selection of Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, to head the bondholders' protective committee.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, counsel for the committee, announced the appointment of Nye to succeed the late Senator Bronson Cutting. His statement said, "It is understood the committee will call on the Cuban government for the immediate negotiation of a settlement."

A bondholders' committee said "political favors" extended Cuba by the United States in the sugar control act and a trade treaty lowering the sugar tariff had enabled the island republic to collect special public works taxes, allocated to pay service charges on the bonds, "over four times the current interest requirements and over twice the sum necessary to pay in full all defaulted and accrued interest thereon."

It charged "discrimination" resulted from a Cuban agreement to pay all accrued interest and arrears on the Speyer and Morgan loans and the Chadbourne sugar bonds, all floated after the public works issue, while no provision was made in the new budget "to pay a cent" on the $40,000,000 issue.

"This committee," said the statement, "has * * * purposely refrained from making demands for the payments rightfully due to the bondholders in order to avoid embarrassing the Mendieta government in any way during the difficult political disturbances through which it has recently passed.

"But the proposed discrimination by the Cuban government against the holders of public works bonds is so shockingly contrary to the express agreement made by Cuba with the bondholders when it borrowed their money that this committee is compelled to take condign action to obtain equitable treatment and prompt payment of the interest due to those bondholders who have entrusted their bonds to its care."

Byrd Now Seeks The Quiet Life

Explorer Suffering From Strain of Polar Trip.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, the only man ever to fly over both the North and South Poles, wants to lead the normal life of an average American for a while, Dr. B. Harrison Ragle, who ordered the explorer to take a complete rest, said tonight.

Dr. Ragle said Admiral Byrd was responding well. Admiral Byrd has been in seclusion at his summer home in Bar Harbor, Me., for nearly a month. His physician said he probably would be there for about three or four months more.

Byrd is suffering great fatigue, which doctors attribute to the strain of planning and organizing the trip and to the six months he spent alone at the advance base in the Antarctic.

A Basis For Compromise.

The social security bill is still held up in conference because the House conferees refuse to incorporate a Senate amendment exempting private pension systems from the Government's old-age pension plan. Under the Clark amendment private annuity plans in existence or in prospect could be maintained if they gave employes benefits equal to or greater than those provided under the Federal plan, and compelled the employer to pay into reserves at least as much as he would have to contribute in the form of taxes to the Government. Furthermore, the private systems would be subject to supervision and examination by the Social Security Board.

With these safeguards, some of the assumed objections to private systems would be removed, but others of a serious nature would remain. For example, there is danger that private employers would select the better risks to the detriment of the Government system, even if they had to make equally heavy contributions to pension funds, since any balance saved could be used to increase benefits. Furthermore, the complications resulting from a multiplication of private plans would be a serious handicap to effective administration of the Government plan.

On the other hand, it would be a great pity to scrap existing plans that have proved their worth, in many cases making more liberal provision for workers than the Government scheme. Over 300 private pension systems, backed by reserves in excess of $700,000,000 and covering 1,000,000 employes, are said to be in existence, apart from those not backed by reserves. It appears that a reasonable compromise between the House and Senate might be found by permitting private plans already established upon a sound basis to survive, while refusing to approve new private systems of any sort.

In that way objections to the double system would lose much of their force. Public-spirited employers would have an opportunity to carry on their good work and aged employes looking forward to comfortable pensions would not be forced to accept the meager allowances provided under the Federal plan.

Welcome Vacancies.

Deportation of alien criminals is not a new policy. President Roosevelt's order under which 151 offenders in this class will be returned to their native countries is significant chiefly because it indicates more extensive application of an established practice. As part of the national campaign to tighten up on law enforcement, it is a step in the right direction.

Criminals in all parts of the world seemingly regard the United States as a land of opportunity for them. At any rate, approximately 2,800 foreign-born offenders are now in prison for Federal crimes, to say nothing of those in State and local institutions. The maintenance of these prisoners is a considerable burden on taxpayers. Wherever their offenses warrant deportation, therefore, it is entirely proper that they should be returned to the countries to which they owe allegiance.

More drastic application of this policy does not mean, of course, that the Department of Justice is "cracking down" upon foreigners in this country. That agency is merely pressing an effective campaign against lawless gangs without regard for nationality, color or race. One result of its effort will be to overtax prison facilities that are already overcrowded. The deportation of alien convicts will be doubly welcome, therefore, since it will leave vacancies in Alcatraz and similar institutions for American felons who are still at large.

Commendable Audition.

There are noises and noises. Some are music to the ears and others produce an insidious irritation that is like nothing else on earth. It is easy to become accustomed to certain sounds and it is said that families living in the roaring curve of the "L" in New York City can not sleep in the quiet country. A bullfrog's croak or a cricket's desolate chirp is as indispensable to the sleep of a suburbanite as the monotonous thump-thump of a ship's machinery is to the sailor.

The Post has gone on record as sponsoring some noises, deploring others. Incessant honking of automobile horns heads our list reserved for A-1 frowns. On the other hand, a veritable campaign was waged in these columns last year for more and louder bells at grade crossings. Likewise we heartily indorsed, and still do, steamboat whistles on the Potomac and the mysterious wail of foghorns. "Lives there a man with soul so dead" who has not felt his blood turn to water at the ghostlike scream of a boat moving precariously through fog or storm? There is an eerie quality to it that suggests adventure and strange landings. This is one charm of the sea that even the most inveterate landlubber can share with those who follow the mast.

It is gratifying, therefore, to learn that the Navy Experiment Station at Annapolis is conducting tooting tests in an attempt to find just the right whistle for our fighting ships. No timbre is overlooked and whistles with bass booms and timorous tenors are accorded all the aplomb of an audition. The experiment station deserve a big hand on this. For it is hard to visualize anything more incongruous than a man-of-war with a nervous soprano squeak.

Mussolini Faces A Showdown.

Mussolini's personal telegram to the Council of the League of Nations is pure chicanery. What he obviously seeks is to prevent impartial settlement of the East African dispute while placing Ethiopia in a position where either his terms of severely circumscribed arbitration, or the responsibility for refusing to arbitrate, will have to be accepted. But there is no indication that either stratagem will succeed.

The Italian government's willingness to participate in the council meeting called for Wednesday, even though it has attempted to fix the terms of its own attendance, gives ground for qualified optimism in the situation. In spite of blustering designed for domestic consumption, Rome is obviously apprehensive over the world-wide criticism which the carefully planned rape of Ethiopia is arousing. Prominent among the restraining factors are the accumulating suggestions that Great Britain close the Suez Canal in the event of hostilities. Such a step would either force Italy to fight Britain, or leave her expeditionary forces cut off from supplies in the arid deserts of Eritrea.

Avoiding bombast, the Italian note to the council, therefore, seeks to prevent effective league intervention without placing the onus for future developments on Rome. Mussolini is playing a diplomatic game to achieve his objectives while saving Italy from formal definition as an aggressor state. When the Italo-Ethiopian arbitration commission reached an impasse some time ago, he rejected the suggestion that a neutral arbitrator be appointed by the council. When it became certain that the league would intervene in the controversy, however, he suggested that the arbitration commission resume its futile sessions. But Italy still insists upon limiting the jurisdiction of the arbitral body so that it could not possibly work out a lasting solution of the border dispute. In the meantime it is always possible that some incident may start hostilities in a manner which will seem to justify Italian conquest.

In these circumstances this week's meeting of the council assumes the highest importance. For whatever its weaknesses, a great virtue of the league is its ability to assess the responsibility for aggression against the peace of the world. From a number of quarters within the last week have come indications that the powers represented on the council may in the test cut through the flimsy pretenses from Rome and compel Mussolini to face the real issue.

It may not be possible for the council to prevent war. But it can officially place the blame for unprovoked and unforgivable violation of the League Covenant and the Kellogg Pact. It can define the issue at stake so clearly that world opinion will become a formidable handicap to the aggressor, particularly if the Ethiopians put up the courageous resistance which may be anticipated. Already the Fascist government is perturbed by increasingly adverse international sentiment. A forthright, courageous attitude on the part of the council, assured of official American support for its intervention in this threatened violation of the Kellogg Pact, will give Mussolini further cause for reflection before he opens a Pandora's box of troubles for his country.

The Greatest Hazard.

In every traffic safety campaign there is a tendency to concentrate more upon what is spectacular than upon what is practical. The current efforts of the police to bring in reckless drivers, speeders, light dodgers, etc., has the enthusiastic support of the community. And they appear to be producing good results. Few stop to realize, however, that the first part of the campaign has entirely ignored the major traffic hazard.

A police survey last year revealed that 75 per cent of the persons killed in automobile accidents were pedestrians. In 68 per cent of these cases the pedestrians were found to be entirely responsible for their own deaths. Drivers were blamed for 19 per cent of the fatalities in this class and the responsibility for the remaining 13 per cent was divided between vehicle operators and the victims on foot.

It is this aspect of the traffic problem which gives particular significance to Maj. Brown's order that children be warned against playing in the street. More than a fifth of all pedestrians struck down in the fiscal year 1934 were children at play in areas set aside for motor traffic. The order suggests that at last the authorities are beginning to face the fact that control of pedestrians for their own protection is an even greater problem than unsafe driving.

Still nothing has been done about the greatest single cause of fatal motor accidents. Jaywalkers who bolt across the paths of on-rushing cars, without regard for crosswalks, account for more than half the victims of vehicle-pedestrian collisions. If every motorist who exceeded 22 miles per hour or disobeyed a rule should be arrested, this careless sacrifice of life would continue.

A safety campaign that ignores the major source of traffic fatalities certainly leaves much to be desired. The warning against playing in the streets should be extended to include the more serious offense of jaywalking. And these warnings may well be followed by regulations and arrests, if necessary, to save pedestrians from the fatal results of their own negligence.

Misplaced Emphasis.

The decisiveness with which the Senate approved the rewritten banking bill—largely the handiwork of Senator Glass—is in sharp contrast with its prior emphatic rejection by a vote of 59 to 10 of the Nye plan. That provides for the establishment of a Government-owned central bank with 48 branches, one in each State. It also calls for the maintenance of a 100 per cent cash reserve against all demand deposits, as well as for payment of the ordinary and extraordinary expenses of government by currency issues until the average price level of 1926 is reached.

Of course there was no possibility that the Senate would seriously consider sweeping away the Federal Reserve system to set up such an agency for creating fiat money, misnamed a "central bank." Nevertheless, the lack of support for this half-baked proposal is encouraging evidence that the heretical doctrines of Father Coughlin, sponsor of the Nye bill, and his followers have not led many Senators to stray from the beaten track. They refuse to be impressed by Senator Nye's naive assertion that a Government central bank would put an end to "criminal speculation" and make bank failures "improbable." By passing the Glass bill they have shown that they are not oblivious to the dangers from political management of any kind of central banking system—even the modified one which exists in this country.

While changes in the existing banking laws are doubtless desirable as a means of centralizing responsibility, the benefits thereby obtained will depend primarily upon the way in which the laws are administered. Weak and inefficient administration will not be reformed by statutory changes. The banking failures of the past, and the mistakes of policy committed by the Federal Reserve Board, can not be explained away merely by pointing to defects in the banking laws.

Without men of outstanding ability and training to conduct and supervise banking operations, the best laws will not prevent disaster. The most ingeniously devised plans will fail if those in control lack the intelligence and the independence which are essential to the safety of the banking system.

Elkton's Redemption.

For a young couple to rout out a sleepy-eyed J. P. and ask him to marry them, perhaps in the presence of his slippered and curl-papered spouse, is one thing; but for a couple to fall into the clutches of a wheedling taxi driver in cahoots with a "marrying parson," who, sans church and sans ceremony other than a hurried incantation muttered in shirt-sleeves and galluses, will marry them for a certain specific consideration in the spiritless murk of an oak-and-plush anteroom is another and infinitely less delectable thing.

Thus it is welcome news that the town of Elkton, on the pike north of Baltimore, has undertaken to discourage its two overly publicized former pastors who have littered its pleasant avenues with garish electric signs proclaiming their willingness, nay, brandishing their eagerness, to perform marriage rites at any time of the day or night. By adopting an ordinance that permits signs advertising virtually every service save that of marrying, Elkton has made a start toward regaining its self-respect.

Last month more than 600 couples were married in this other Gretna, although Elkton boasts a population of only 3,500. In the last year some 6,000 marriages were performed in the town. No doubt most of the ceremonies would have been performed elsewhere had not Elkton been so convenient. But in that event they would have been free from the incidental racketeering, the tawdry commercialization and the casual nature of Elkton weddings. Moreover, they would have been performed by responsible officials and with a little more deliberation. And it is reasonable to suppose that the proportion of lasting matrimonial successes would have been higher.

In times when divorce laws, in the District for example, are being generally revised in an effort to improve the happiness of American family life, Elkton does well to crack down on those who make a business of inducting persons in a light and careless mood into the solemnities of matrimony.

Aliens Here Illegally.

From the Kansas City Star.

In view of the fairly prevalent impression that the country is filled with aliens who are here illegally and, if deported, would leave vacant many jobs for American citizens, it is useful to have the statement of the commissioner of immigration that there are less than 100,000 aliens in the United States who entered without legal permission. Taken by itself, that figure may seem large, but for a country as large as the United States, with a population in excess of 125 million, it scarcely involves a problem of major importance.

Deportation of designated classes of criminal aliens and of those whose residence in America is illegal on any ground is going on all the time. Pending legislation is calculated to promote both the justice and effectiveness of this activity. It is the process to which the country may look for its security in the one particular.

Protests Carline Changes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Public Utilities Commission has recently given an order (No. 1329) to remove the street car tracks on Kennedy street northwest, between Georgia avenue and Fourteenth street, and then shunt all cars now coming from Takoma Park via Kennedy street down Georgia avenue, instead of Fourteenth street. A feeder bus will be put in operation "during non-rush periods only" for some of the people in upper Brightwood that will transfer them to the end of the Fourteenth street car line which will then terminate at Fourteenth and Colorado. During rush periods they can take their chances on an express bus. This feeder bus will not even connect the Georgia avenue car line with the Fourteenth street carline. The order states: "The objections to removal of the tracks between Georgia avenue and Fourteenth street by residents east of Georgia avenue were based on the loss of direct contact with the Fourteenth street car line. The objection is recognized by the commission as substantial and warranting serious consideration." Yet the order is given to go ahead with it.

As near as I can ascertain, few people know about this proposed change and those who do are very much opposed to it and cannot understand it. The order cuts all of Takoma Park and most of Brightwood off from Columbia Heights, a nearby business district, and from all the main shopping district west of Ninth street downtown. Residents who establish themselves in a certain location usually do so in consideration of the transportation facilities at hand. After people have bought homes it is certainly most unjust for the Public Utilities Commission to deliberately deprive them of these facilities.

Basin Fishermen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is my opinion that at the time of the original planning and layout of our public parks it was the intent of the park commission to provide a quiet, peaceful place for relaxation, free from foul odors and untidiness.

The little park surrounding the basin, which as we all know, is one of Washington's show places, and a park more frequently visited by out-of-town guests than any other, with the possible exception of Rock Creek, has become a fishing haunt for scores of men, women and children, with apparently no ambition except to fish. The south side of the basin, just off Fourteenth street, is continually cluttered with old newspapers, foul-smelling bags, and left-over bits of lunches and bait. Such gross untidiness is unpardonable, and a disgrace to our Capital City.

If fishing is to continue around our beautiful basin, the Park Commission should at least make adequate provision for the disposal of waste, require those frequenting the basin to dispose of debris in the proper manner and make an honest effort to see that such requirements are complied with.

To permit this fishing is certainly not conducive to job hunting. The type of people who frequent the place certainly do not appear to be in a position to spend their summers fishing, neither do they have the appearance of seeking employment. No doubt, 50 per cent of these people are on relief and, if such be the case, will continue to be on a dole so long as fishing is in season and Uncle Sam continues to be generous.

The League And France.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: France can not afford to lose the League of Nations. For Italy to leave the league would ruin it, we are told. But for the league to abandon Abyssinia to her fate would ruin the league.

Now let France decide carefully: Is Italy's friendship worth as much as the league to her? Is fidelity within the league worth anything to her? Is the respect and confidence of the small nations of the world worth anything? Is the good will of England and America?

We shall have the answer very soon now. France today holds the life of the league in her hands and because its integrity is its life she can not abandon Abyssinia after China and be worth a hoot.

About Franz Gruber.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is refreshing to find credit being given where credit is due. A worthy instance of this is found on your editorial page for July 8 where, under the heading, "Belated Recognition," the writer stresses the fact that "international homage has only recently been paid to the memory of Franz Gruber," the gifted Austrian, who "gave to the world the exquisite music of 'Stille Nacht.'"

Doubtless, the writer of the good editorial in question is aware of the homage paid to the memory of Father Joseph Mohr (who wrote the words of "Silent Night") and to Gruber, the village schoolmaster (who composed the inspiring hymn) by the Austrians and Bavarians who, a few years ago, erected the monument at Oberndorf, a Bavarian town near Salzburg.

Nevertheless, I make free to ask that you kindly give to him with my compliments the enclosed story of "Silent Night" that I penned in 1930, for the Fauquier Democrat, of Warrenton, Va. It may have some feature of interest for him; such as the first accompaniment being that of the guitar. And kindly tell the writer for me that the world is made better by "recognition" of worthy happenings such as he records.

MISS INNO McGILL.

[Enclosure.]

Again this Christmas, in every corner of the world, will be sung the sweet carol, "Silent Night, Holy Night." Of all the Christmas songs of many lands, this simple tribute to the Babe Divine seems to have attained the greatest affection. It is heard wherever the Feast of Nativity is celebrated.

A monument recently unveiled at Oberndorf-on-the-Salsach, a Bavarian town near Salzburg, commemorated the composing there of this famous song 117 years ago, by a Catholic priest, Father Joseph Mohr. It was set to music by the village schoolmaster, Franz Xavier Gruber.

Because the organ of the parish church had been irreparably damaged in a flood, the melody of "Silent Night, Holy Night," was composed for the guitar, and the refrain that was destined to be heard in all the cathedrals of the world was first sung by a group of school girls to the accompaniment of the guitar in the humble church of Oberndorf.

Father Mohr died in 1848 and Master Gruber in 1865.

A monument at the village church represents the poet-priest listening in Heaven to the sweet strains of his song. The recently erected Gruber-Mohr monument is the gift of Bavarians and Austrians and represents the poet and the composer standing hand-in-hand. The sculpture is the work of the sculptor-priest, Father Joseph Muehlbacher, of Kuffstein-Zell.

Mind Own Business?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In issue of July 26, re Congressmen's attitude to Hitler, much is made in the headlines of Dickstein—nothing of Blanton. Is Washington truly, as some people suspect, a pocket edition of New York? Can't we mind our own business?

Proposes Sectional Market Seasons

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Cutting of cotton, corn, tobacco and peanut acreage in the South has released this land for the production of truck crops, bringing them into competition with those produced further North, causing ruinous prices all along the line.

The production and distribution of the Nation's food supply is a vastly complex machine, which must not be tampered with, unless done so by mechanics who know what they are doing, and who will make proper allowance for all adjustments, thus tuning up the whole. Turning a screw here and there only throws the agricultural machine out of balance, as evidenced by the ruinous prices received by farmers for snap beans, potatoes, tomatoes, etc.

Seventy-five per cent of the snap beans produced in Somerset County were plowed under. Another truck crop was hurriedly planted, which will compete with that of Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, etc., thus bringing ruin upon all. This scene is re-enacted many times from Florida to New England.

Remedy: Allot each section a season to market each product. If a farmer knows he will be unable to market a crop he will not plant it. A North Carolina farmer does not profit by shipping late crops at a loss, but he does glut the market, thereby bankrupting the Eastern Shore farmer.

Further adjustments could be made to compensate for abnormal seasons.

I would suggest that a survey be made at once and that immediate action be taken in accordance with its findings.

The Post Impressionist

Death In The Maquis

Post Office, Monday.

When Spada was guillotined the other day, the American newspapers published little about it—though, during the career of that Corican bandit, they and the news reels had plenty to say and to show concerning him. The French press, on the other hand, kept up chronicle and comment to the last.

Now the mail brings those papers to Washington. They are illuminating—and not only because they belie the cabled stories picturing Spada as a madman.

He was born at Ajaccio in '97—128 years after Napoleon was born there—deserted from the army, went to jail for it, and was no sooner liberated in 1822 than, at a festival in Sari d'Orcho, he killed a gendarme engaged in arresting a friend of the deserter. With one companion, Spada was besieged by 30 policemen in a peasant's hut—and fought a fatal way out—the traditional beginning.

The traditional continuation, too: He robbed the poor as well as the rich, beat his mistresses, murdered old men and children, terrorized the peasantry into secret assistance—and so "befooled the magistrates and mocked the gendarmes."

He was "The Tiger of the Cinarca" now. He occupied a veritable eagle's nest in the Punta, where all the world knew that he was, yet where none dared follow him in for 11 years.

Then the Paris government acted. A little army was sent to Corsica, complete with machine-guns and tanks. Spada descended to the village of Coggia—prayed before the cross in the public square.

"I'll never be taken alive!" he had boasted.

He let himself be taken alive.

A traditional end also? Well, he did die well.

Two years in prison. Repentance, apparently sincere. "He who kills ought to know death," said Spada. The guillotine was ready.

He dressed himself in his best black velours, went to confession and Mass, refused the usual physical consolations: "I've never drunk or smoked; I shan't start now." To the knife and its basket he walked alone . . .

A large portion of the French public made a hero of Spada while he lived: much such a hero as many Americans made of Dillinger last year, of Tracy 32 years before. Now Spada is dead, the correspondents sent to Bastia for his execution express a fretful surprise—as certain American correspondents express it in the presence of our own defunct Tracys and Dillingers—that, seen at close quarters, the bandit had nothing romantic about him:

"You cannot imagine that, living, he would inspire anything except repulsion."

In such ingenuous statements there lies an obvious moral truth—too obvious here to be considered. But besides it is couched in esthetic truth, less obvious perhaps, yet, in its own way, no less important.

Spada alive, at large and at a distance—Spada appearing now here, now there, and duly reported by wires and wireless—Spada doing daring deeds afar: that was essentially an imaginative figure. However veracious were the stories told of him—and it is probable that the very wildest fell little short of the truth—he was none the less an unreality.

The unconscious artist who lives in every man idealized Spada almost as effectively as a certain sort of conscious artist would have idealized him. This insidious brush so suppressed the realism and so heightened the romance that, when impartial Truth revealed the brutal fact to sober sense, the imagination received a severe shock. The picture was torn by the reality.

Thus considered, Spada, Dillinger, Tracy—call him what you will—becomes a purely literary question. The naive surprise of disappointed journalists accentuates that principle of selection which is the secret of successful romance.

In Tracy's time readers were all more or less amused by frankly fictitious Chimmie Fadden—but the real Bowery tough was one of the last persons in New York with whom the admirers of Chimmie would have cared to come into contact. Modern instances are easy. And, if they ever read older books, men and women perhaps still would chuckle over the peccadillos of the Artful Dodger, the "vulgar assurance" of Rittmaster Dalgetty, the progress of Gil Blas.

But, in real life, none of these personages would wear well as a companion—and that quite aside from ethical considerations. No, not even D'Artagnan—nor Lazarillo de Tormes: read Louis How's translation!

It is the mere imitation of real life, the selection and exaggeration—either or both—that, in the last analysis, forms the secret of romantic characterization. The Post Impressionist is all for Falstaff—even all for Ainsworth's, if not Defoe's, Jack Sheppard—as against Spada and Dillinger and Baby-Face Nelson.

On Noiseless Artillery.

ALL persons who have studied the slip-horn or the saxaphone will sympathize with the United States Coast Artillery in its current dilemma regarding the two 16-inch guns at Fort Tilden, N. Y. These guns have been silent for 12 years and were to have been fired recently to determine whether they could shoot, but the test has been postponed out of consideration fro the neighbors.

A cannon has this in common with certain musical instruments: that it cannot be mastered without considerable inconvenience to persons living nearby. Necessity, that prolific mother, has produced a silent, or theoretical piano keyboard which emits only dull, fuzzy thumps, for the convenience of concert artists on tour who might otherwise be tossed out of their hotels for annoying their fellow-guests, free of charge, with the same music which they would have to pay money to hear under formal conditions behind the turnstiles.

But the same mother has been unable to do anything worth while for those who attack the more raucous type of horns because experience has confirmed the finding of Weber and Fields that wind which goes in ever so sweet may still come out ever so sour.

Practical trial and error is the only system by which the patient may learn to produce sweet wind out of a horn end and, for this reason, trombonists, saxophonists, cornettists and clarinetists have become a sort of race apart, persecuted, sullen, suspicious and defensive. It will be the sincere hope of those who believe in a strong national defense that the Coast Artillery Corps will not be reduced to the same unhappy condition.

Yet, the only certain way to discover whether a big gun has developed a fadeaway, out-curve or hop to its fast one is to try it now and again. This cannot be done without considerable noise and vibration in the immediate neighborhood of the piece, all contrary to the composure of the neighbors and the safety of the souvenir teapot which was won, at considerable expense, at the Japanese roll-the-ball fake on the boardwalk at Atlantic City when the gentleman and lady of the house were bride and groom.

* * * *

Practical firing may be reduced to a minimum and theoretical tests may serve certain purposes between times, with crews going through all the motions and a sergeant to yell "bang" in a modulated voice, calculated not to make the baby. But one shot per gun every 12 years can hardly be condemned as excessive gunplay and the warriors of the human race have become so bold that it is put to rout by a sergeant's cry of "bang!" taking a long chance to depend on an enemy's being

There are battles on record which were won by the intimidating power of suggestion, the Russians claiming to have bluffed the Turks one time by the mere sight of a pile of cannon balls so big that common sense should have todl them that no artillery then existing could heave them.

If the military men of the world were still as naive as that, then Hollywood would become the American Krupps, for there is no place on earth where such convincing illusions may be wrought in such materials as wood, canvas and paint.

Visiting one of Mr. De Mille's Biblical sets one afternoon in Hollywood, your correspondent jerked with might and main to lift an iron war club and nearly fell over backward when the weapno proved to have been made of a few ounces of rubber.

* * * *

Perhaps a fifty-fifty proportion of dummy artillery would have some effect on an enemy just as the same proportion of dummy musical instruments in a big band was found feasible by some of the noted American maestros in the era of the amusement park band shell. But there must be some guns which are capable of shooting veritable missiles over a distance of land or sea with reasonable accuracy. The baseball addict may regard a change of pace ro a right-angled downer as a thing of rare beauty, but there is a time and place for everything and a gun, in time of war, is not admirable for those qualities which may elevate a pitcher to the status of national hero, pro tem.

Their fellow citizens will sympathize with the residents of the region of Fort ilden who silenced the guns for a still longer time after 12 years lest the noise disturbs the afternoon repose of little Shirley. But there were little Shirleys ten years ago and there will always be some. In the meanwhile the Coast Artillery Corps may be permitted an honest professional curiosity as to whethre their 16-inch rifles have developed a slice, hook or foozle.

* * * *

When Mussolini forbade the yodel, the native cry of the Austrians in certain parts of the irridentist country, the wily Austrians outsmarted him by yodeling the Italian national anthem.

The Coast Artillery might fire the guns some night and explain, when the colonel is called before the judge, that it was just some of Shultz's boys or J. Edgar Hoover's boys pursuing the normal tenor of their way.

Theater vs. Movie

By

William Lyon Phelps

THEY are having this summer, in England, a very interesting lawsuit arising out of the famous motion picture, "Cavalcade," the film version of the equally famous play of the same name, written by the clever Noel Coward, and probably the best thing he ever did. In London, in 1932, I saw the play, and a year later I saw the movie in America; if anything, the movie was better than the play, because it could use more scenery. The most striking incident in both, however, was the sinking of the steamer Titanic, which went down on its first voyage in April, 1912.

Well, the people who were giving the legitimate play in the provinces of England complained that the movie production ruined their business; therefore they brought suit to recover damages.

* * * *

One day in June the most famous of all living British play-producers, Charles B. Cochran, went on the stand and gave some testimony as to the difference between a play and a movie.

Mr. Cochran said that the movie rights in "Cavalcade" belonged equally to him and Mr. Coward, and that he and Mr. Coward had got $100,000 for them; as to the distinction between the movie and the theater, Mr. Cochran said, "I maintain there are no rules in our business except that the show must be a good one. I have often been asked by the press to state my opinion about the competition between the film and the theater. From the very start, from the first great talking picture shown in London, I have always maintained that there is no relation between the film and the theater—that both are excellent in their way. I, personally, enjoy both forms of entertainment. I might call myself a film fan. But I 'drop in' to a film—I make preparations to go to a theater. I think that applies to all classes. I think the miner washes his face and puts on a clean collar to go to a theater. He just 'drops in' at a film."

The New Tax Program

No Need For Higher Taxes If Budget Balance Awaits Recovery.

The Post presents herewith the first of a series of six analytical articles on the tax proposals now under congressional consideration. The author is professor of finance at New York University and an outstanding authority in this field.

By Dr. Jules I. Bogen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

WHEN it was proposed at the end of June to jam a new tax program through Congress as a rider to the nuisance tax extension resolution then pending, a Nation-wide wave of protest arose. Popular common sense recognized the fact that new taxes have complex and far-reaching economic and social, as well as fiscal, implications, and that these should be given adequate study and analysis before actual enactment is attempted.

Happily, the rash plan to rush a whole series of new and little-understood changes in the Federal tax system through the national legislature within a few days has been abandoned.

There is no more vital problem before Congress and the people at large today than this issue of national tax policy. This is all the more true because the broad and vague tax proposals contained in the President's message of June 19 are avowedly only a beginning, so that the policies therein reflected may be expected to guide the further fiscal proposals of this Administration while it remains in power.

These new Federal taxes, furthermore, will doubtless have important repercussions on the development of taxation by the States, as has been the case in the past.

Every tax proposal must be studied at least from three main viewpoints. These are its fiscal aspects, its economic effects and its social implications. Each of these viewpoints will be considered separately in this series of articles.

* * * *

TO gain a clear idea of the fiscal aspects of the new tax proposals, it is necessary first to understand clearly the present budgetary position of the Federal Government. Thoughtful observers have been seriously concerned over the vast Government expenditures of the depression years. The perils to monetary and economic stability of a chronic excess of Treasury expenditures over income are obvious, and they have been amply illustrated by concrete examples in a number of countries, especially since the war. Furthermore, expenditures of all governmental jurisdictions in this country are estimated now to aggregate more than one-third of the total national income. Only by raising the tax burden in proportion can the very pressing need for reducing the present swollen rate of spending by political bodies be brought home to the rank and file of the population.

What is the true relation between Federal Government expenditures and its income from taxation at the present time?

The preliminary figures of actual receipts and expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, show that the Federal Government had ordinary receipts of $3,800,000,000, and general expenditures of $3,721,000,000 during that twelve-month period. This left an indicated surplus in the so-called "ordinary budget" of $79,000,000. However, $574,000,000 of the general expenditures were for the purpose of debt retirement. Without the sinking fund, therefore, the surplus in the "ordinary budget" was $653,000,000. Emergency expenditures amounted to $3,655,000,000, leaving a real deficit, but without allowance for debt retirement, of slightly over $3,000,000,000.

The depression years have already witnessed substantial increases both in the number and the rates of Federal taxes. Hence, with further business recovery, a considerable expansion in the Treasury's receipts from existing rates of taxation would follow. Thoughtful estimates indicate that the regular receipts of the Government may reach some $6,000,000,000 if the present rates should apply and business should return to about the 1928 level.

* * * *

THE following table shows the chief sources of Government income yielded in the fiscal year ended June 30 last, and what they would approximate in a year in which business should again attain the 1928 levels (in millions of dollars):

	1936	If conditions equaled those of 1928
Income taxes	$1,099	$2,600
Misc. Internal Revenue taxes	1,657	2,360
Processing taxes	821	500
Customs	343	450
Miscellaneous receipts	180	200
Total	$3,800	$6,000

Better business would also permit curtailment of the emergency outlays. Even if these were reduced to $2,000,000,000 annually, existing Federal taxes in a relatively prosperous year should prove adequate to cover the combined regular and extraordinary budget, with considerable allowance for debt retirement as well. If extraordinary outlays fell to $1,000,000,000, a probable minimum since certain items in the list are not really "emergency," there would be left more than $1,500,000,000 for debt retirement in a year of business prosperity, based on existing taxes and rates.

Of course, sound fiscal management dictates that the Federal budget should be balanced as soon as possible, without waiting for additional business improvement. However, if the Administration insists upon spending $4,000,000,000 annually for relief, the only way to balance the budget immediately would be to impose a truly Draconic series of new and very high taxes applicable to all classes of the population. Obviously, a few imposts applicable chiefly to a small group and designed to raise several hundred million dollars a year is a futile fiscal gesture, and one that does not begin to solve the very serious budgetary problem in hand.

* * * *

ASIDE from debt retirement, it is evident that it would not require much more of an improvement in business to bring a balanced budget within reach through a curtailment of emergency expenditures. If all those who now receive Federal relief were to be supported by direct home relief, instead of on public works, emergency outlays would fall to about $500 per man, or $1,750,000,000 for 3,500,000 unemployed. The budget could then be balanced, aside from debt requirements, with only a moderate increase in receipts from existing taxes.

Furthermore, while the gross public debt has risen to almost $29,000,000,000, the low rate of interest paid on its new obligations and the refunding of old bonds into lower coupon issues have brought down the annual interest charge of the Treasury to less than $800,000,000 yearly. The annual charge is not materially greater on the present interest-bearing debt of $28,000,000,000 than it was on the $18,000,000,000 national debt of 1928.

If we assume that business will improve but will not quite reach the levels of 1928, and that emergency outlays of $2,000,000,000 a year or so will be required for some time to come, are additional tax revenues needed? The answer is, only for the purpose of retiring the national debt.

* * * *

RETIREMENT of the existing record national debt as rapidly as feasible is, per se, an extremely desirable fiscal policy. The Nation has good reason to be very thankful to the Mellon administration of the Federal Treasury for its repayment of a large proportion of the national debt between 1920 and 1928, for the $13,000,000,000 debt rise of the last five years has been superimposed upon a previous debt of $16,000,000,000 only. If it were not for the post-war debt retirements, our aggregate debt now would be $39,000,000,000, instead of $29,000,000,000, and we would be that much nearer a major financial crisis.

In the present instance, however, there is a special factor which complicates the situation. Congress is expected to enact into law shortly the social security bill, which sets up large reserves for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance. The old age reserve account alone is expected by the President's committee on economic security to attain $36,000,000,000 by 1965, a sum larger than the entire existing direct debt of the Federal Government. The unemployment trust fund, although far smaller, may possibly amount to an additional $2,000,000,000 or so, it has been estimated.

The Secretary of the Treasury is required by law to invest these vast reserves, and only in Government bonds. Hence, within about 30 years, the present national debt would in effect be retired, or at least withdrawn from the public, without any sinking fund payments at all, if the social security bill should be enacted in its present form and its provisions should meet the test of constitutionality.

OF course, it may well be that Congress will at some future date lay violent hands upon the old age reserve fund and divert it to some other purpose, or use it to increase benefit payments to beneficiaries of the fund. As it is set up in the pending bill, however, the Administration is providing machinery for the gradual absorption of the existing national debt by a fund which, like the reserves of our great life insurance companies, will tend to remain intact indefinitely.

There will be no occasion for making any large payments out of this reserve, as the income of the fund is expected to exceed the outgo until about 1980, and thereafter the two will about balance. As long as this measure remains on the statute books, therefore, it is not logical to make provision to retire the existing national debt at any rapid pace. In fact, if the present national debt should be retired, it would become impossible for the Secretary of the Treasury to operate the old age reserve account in the manner required by the social security bill unless new Government bonds were issued solely to keep it invested.

The old age reserve account, as now set up, would in effect be tantamount to a large sinking fund. There is no need to provide doubly for debt retirement under such circumstances. Even if we do not seek an immediate increase in Government revenues, fundamental modifications in our present system of taxation may be desirable, of course, on administrative, economic and social grounds. That, however, is a separate problem which we will consider in the later articles of this series.

Words And Music By Mark Twain.

HALLEY'S COMET and the infant Samuel Clemens arrived in the same year, the latter being worth a couple of dozen of the former in any man's eye. For after all the stew and pother of estimating literary greatness is done with, the fact remains that Mark Twain has been for two generations the most popular and well-beloved of American authors. That the record is not more numerically impressive is simply because there hasn't been time enough. Some day, around the year 3000 A. D., we might possibly become a Latinized or a Slavicized or an Orientalized race (forgive me for going Spengler on you), but until that consummation scarcely to be devoutly wished for has been reached, the story-teller of Hannibal will undoubtedly stay snug amid our auricles and ventricles.

And if any of the solemn and arty are among us, who cannot believe that popular stature has any but an inverse kinship to literary canonization, let them be reminded that diligent electioneering on their part has never brought forward a better claimant to the title of the great American novel than "Huckleberry Finn."

So this year being the centenary of Mark Twain's birth (the exact date is November 30) we are bound to have celebrations of one kind or another, and, of course, books. I am only normally prone to rashness, but I shall eat my hat if the year brings forth any more honest, illuminating and exhilarating book on Mark than Bernard De Voto's "Mark Twain's America," which appeared in 1932 and is now being published in a centenary edition. It was the first and, so far as I know, the only study to relate Mark Twain realistically to his environment, to see him as the last and certainly the greatest of the school of frontier humorists, and to rescue him from the dubious distinction awarded by certain critics of being "a frustrated and unhappy artist." All in all, "Mark Twain's America" is, as John Chamberlain said, "One of the most beautiful and deep-seeking books on America that we have."

* * * *

BUT I want to get on to the first book of the new crop—Cyril Clemens' "Mark Twain Wit and Wisdom" (Stokes, $1.75). Mr. Clemens, president of the International Mark Twain Society—and son of Mark's cousin, has gathered together an unpretentious little volume of Mark Twain anecdotes. Just that and nothing more. But, for the Mark Twain idolator, it is enough.

As Stephen Leacock writes in the preface: "Of one or two stories in the present volume I have heard it said by the pedantic that they are as old as the Greeks. To which I can only reply that in that case the Greeks stole them from Mark Twain." For the hall-mark is his.

You remember how Mark's wife, in order to cure his cussing, thought she could shame him one day by swearing fluently in his presence. "Ah, Livy," and he looked at her sadly, "you've got the words, but not the music." Here, though, are both.

* * * *

THERE was the time—and you must understand there ought to be quotation marks around these excerpts, but my quote key is in poor health and must be coddled along—when Mark was interviewed by a young reporter and asked for his life story. Taking a draw on his pipe, Mark began: "Well, in the days of King George the Third, when I was a young man, I used——" "Pardon me right there," interrupted the reporter. "I know that you are no spring chicken, but how could you possibly have been living during the time of George the Third?" "Fine, young man!" returned Mark, smilingly offering him a cigar. "I heartily congratulate you. You are the first and only reporter I ever met in my whole life who corrected a mistake before it appeared in print!"

Once Mark finished a speech at a dinner, to be followed by a lawyer, who arose, shoved his hands deep into his pockets, as was his habit, and laughingly inquired of those present: "Doesn't it strike this company as a little unusual that a professional humorist should be so funny?" When the laughter had died down, Mark drawled out: "Doesn't it strike this company as a little unusual that a lawyer should have his hands in his own pockets?"

And again, at another dinner which he had attended with the understanding that he would not be called upon to make a speech, he arose toward the end to be greeted with loud applause. Pausing until all was quiet, he addressed himself to the waiter. "Waiter," he said, "please pass the bread," and he sat down.

* * * *

PICKING anecdotes out of this rich, though occasionally weak-kneed, array, I am aware, will show you only my own peculiar predilections. But certainly of considerable wide merit is his remark that "more than one cigar at a time is excessive smoking," or his reply to a friend—who had complained of Andrew Carnegie and his money: "I think that man's money is tainted!"—which ran: "You are right, it is tainted: 'tain't yours and tain't mine."

We come very close to the essential Mark Twain flavor in the tale of his inviting a friend to visit him. The friend wrote him that he would be unable to do so, and ended the letter saying: "God be with you, for I can not." Mark, after a few days, sent the letter back with this scrawled at the bottom: "Dear ———. He didn't come. Next time please send someone we can depend upon."

But it seems to me the essence of the kernel of the gist lies in the following: In Buffalo a clergyman and his brother lived across the street from Mark, and one morning, while they were enjoying their after-breakfast cigars on the front porch, they saw him come to his front door in dressing gown and slippers and look over at them. He smoked a while and gazed, and at last he opened his gate and came lounging across the street. Dropping into a rocking-chair, he sighed with content. He smoked for a few minutes, then said:

"Nice morning."

One of the hosts replied: "Yes, very pleasant."

"Shouldn't wonder if we had rain by and by."

"Well, we could stand a little."

"Nice house you have here."

"Yes, we rather like it."

"How's your family?"

"Quite well—and yours?"

"Oh, we're all comfortable."

There was another impressive silence, and finally Mark crossed his legs, blew a puff of smoke in the air, and in his lazy drawl remarked: "I suppose you're a little surprised to find me over so early, but this morning I came over because I thought you might be interested to know that your roof is on fire."

I don't know how you feel about it, but whenever I get to thinking I was born out of my time, I lay all my reasons to Mark Twain. There isn't another man in our chronicles I'd rather have known.

'Birds' Forced Down Plane

By the United Press.

Bucharest, Rumania, July 28.—A Russian pilot of a huge bombing plane who alibied: "I was forced down by birds," was released by authorities today.

The pilot and crew had been arrested when they made an unauthorized landing at Cerno in Rumanian territory.

"Birds swarmed in the plane's path," the pilot explained. "Rather than escape they fought us. Some were killed but others damaged the plane, making it advisable to land at the nearest airport."

Seattle, July 28.—Like a giant eagle, Boeing 299, huge bomber and largest land plane in America, swept down Boeing Field here today and into the air for a successful initial test flight.

After an hour and a half in the sky, Leslie R. Tower, test pilot, and his co-pilot, Louis Walt, grinning broadly, pronounced the great war weapon an unqualified success.

The 15-ton ship with a 105-foot wing span, and 70 feet long, lifted into the air with its four motors roaring 10 seconds after it started.

"Just like flying a little ship, only a little bigger," smiled the lanky, blue-eyed Tower after he set the mammoth plane down.

At a reputed cost of $500,000 the Boeing Airplane Co. built the bomber for Army use. It will be demonstrated to high officials of the air corps at Dayton, Ohio, August 22.

Tower said he flew at an altitude of between 7,000 and 8,000 feet. The plane "cruised" at about 200 miles an hour.

The plane has a total of 3,000 horsepower, each motor providing 750 horsepower.

Five machine gun turrets, protected by a new formula unbreakable glass, just from the aluminum body, which is equipped with an automatic pilot, two-way radio telephone and a radio "homing" device. Quarters are provided for 10 men. The retractable landing wheels have air brakes.

Belleville, Ill., July 28.—Ten members of Congress, nine of them members of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring lefe here by plane for Washington today after inspecting the Army's lighter-than-air flying base at Scott Field.

The congressional party flew here late yesterday from Fort Knox at Louisville, Ky., where they inspected the Army's mechanized Cavalry unit.

The group, flying in two transport planes, is expected to make a brief stopover at Dayton for refueling before continuing to the Capital.

Construction of the TC-14, believed to be the largest nonrigid dirigible in the world, neared completion.

The initial test flight of the new craft, largest of four of its type stationed at the airport, is scheduled for early in August.

The TC-14, being built at an estimated $200,000 cost, will have a capacity of 348,000 cubic feet of helium gas. It will be 235 feet long.

The ship carries a crew of six pilots, two radio operators and two engineers. Gasoline capacity is 1,340 gallons and the gondola, empty, weighs 6,264 pounds.

Moscow, July 28.—Discovery of new land between the North Pole and the American continent is one of the possibilities of Sigmund Levaneffsky's over-the-pole flight to San Francisco, another polar flier said today.

Writing in the newspaper Pravda, Gen. Umberto Nobile, Italian aviator who has made several polar flights, said existence of land in this region is still an open question. During his flight of 1926, Nobile said, dense fog and clouds cut off from the occupants of his dirigible the view of the sea over the area where land is thought to be.

"We saw no sign of Harris Land, supposed to extend from the shore of the North American continent to the North Pole," Nobile wrote. "We saw no islands either, but our view of the sea was cut off except for short intervals.

"Who can confirm that land does not exist there and who knows if the fog that accompanied us 1,300 kilometers (about 808 miles) along our course did not conceal this land from us? It constitutes an open question and I hope that Levaneffsky will have opportunities for discovery that were denied us."

The "mystery" plane in which Levaneffsky contemplates a nonstop flight to San Francisco was delayed further today in its take-off by unfavorable weather.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 28.—The first transpacific air route was declared ready for operations today when the Pan American Airways' supply and construction ship North Haven returned here from its 15-week mission of establishing ocean stations for flying passenger liners.

Fifty-nine workers who prepared fuel and radio stations at lonely Midway and Wake Islands and at Guam were aboard the freight vessel.

They were greeted by Col. Clarence M. Young, manager of the Airways' Pacific division, who announced that the route is now ready for the big planes which will carry passengers, freight and mail between California and the Orient.

Col. Young said no date had been set for start of the service, but that exploration flights probably would be completed soon by the 19-ton clipper plane now based at the Alameda Airport.

what has been written into it. All I know about it is that I received a notice of the full committee meeting tomorrow. It's impossible to make plans on a bill when you don't know what is in it."

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee, was out of the city, but is expected back today in time to attend the committee meeting.

House leaders were making plans to push the bill through that chamber by the end of the week, though it is considered certain that there will be attempts to amend the measure.

Senate Finance Committee hearings on provisions of the bill are to be opened tomorrow by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, but are expected to be brief.

A stormier course awaits the tax bill in the Senate, it is indicated. There awaits a strong bloc of Democrats, including David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, who are opposed to the principles on which the program is based, while its liberals are determined to broaden the scope of the measure.

In addition, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, said last night there had been no change in the plan announced by him a week ago to attempt to attach the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill and the Patman bonus bill to the tax bill.

Disclaiming sole authorship of the proposal, the Idahoan declared there were several other Senators interested in it and asserted there had been no change in the plan, so far as he knew.

In his address eiting Socialist Party planks which he said the New Deal had largely carried out, Senator Metcalf said:

On the subject of taxation the Socialist platform had twothings to say: First, steeply increased inheritance taxes and income taxes on the higher incomes and estates of both corporations and individuals; second, a constitutional amendment authorizing the taxation of all Government securities. To carry out the first of these pledges of the Socialist Party the Administration is now attempting to push through Congress one of the most radical tax bills that has ever been introduced.

Implications Recited.

"It does not seek to tax in order to obtain revenue for the Government, but in order to destroy capital and break down the possibility of large corporations continuing as such. In his platform of 1932, the Democratic candidate promised a balanced budget and a fair and equitable system of taxation. In practice this Administration has done exactly the opposite by fulfilling the promises of the Socialist platform and abandoning the promises upon which the people elected their candidate.

"The prposa of the Administration was that large corporations should be taxed heavily on their income and small corporations should pay a smaller percentage of taxes. The heavy taxes on large organizations were to be assessed regardless of the actual percentage of earned profit. In other words, corporations are to be penalized and taxed simply because they are large. Likewise, almost completely confiscatory taxes are to be placed on large inheritances. In this regard the Administration has carried out almost to a letter the pledges made by the Socialist candidate in 1932 and has completely ignored those of the Democratic platform."

Other Socialist planks which Metcalf said the Administration is carrying out dealt with relief and public works, labor, old-age pensions, banking, public ownership of natural resources and public utilities and foreign relations.

Maryland Bank Deposits Gain $20,609,202

127 State Bank and Trust Companies Included in Report.

Aggregate deposits in all State banking institutions of Maryland increased $20,609,202 during the first six months of 1935, State Bank Commissioner John J. Ghingher announced yesterday.

The gain was amassed by a total of 127 State banks and trust companies and 13 mutual savings institutions. An abstract for all institutions as of the close of business on the last day of June showed total demand deposits of $116,441,526 and total time deposits of $98,702,458.

Absolutely accurate comparisons of deposits and other banking figures with the comparable date a year ago is impossible, the commissioner explained, because a year ago 11 State banks and trust companies were still operating on a restricted basis, whereas figures for the current June statement are all for fully open institutions.

The 13 mutual savings banks show deposits as of June 29 of $205,882,688.89, an increase of $5,579,852.32 over the figures submitted last December 31 and a gain of $9,632,273.29 over the total deposits recorded June 20, 1934.

B. & O. Income Drops $463,108 During June

A decrease of $463,108 in net operating income during June as compared with the same month of 1934 was reported yesterday by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The net during the past month was $2,383,073, while last year it was $2,846,181.

Total revenue for the month was $12,131,850, compared with $12,640,365 for June, 1934, a decrease of $508,515. Freight revenue amounted to $10,516,666, a decrease of $336,210, and passenger revenue was $905,161, a decrease of $65,202.

Operating expenses for the month amounted to $8,767,061, compared with $8,633,799, an increase of $133,262. Maintenance of way and structure outlays were decreased $51,069 for the month, and maintenance of equipment increased $54,007. Traffic expenses were $19,430 higher, while transportation costs were $83,231 higher than for June last year.

Net railway operating income amounted to $2,383,073, compared with $2,846,181, a decrease of $463,108, or 16.2 per cent.

For the first six months of 1934 gross revenue amounted to $68,996,170, compared with $69,704,759, a decrease of $708,589.

Operating expenses for the six months amounted to $51,574,307, compared with $51,974,388, a decrease of $400,081, while net railway operating income amounted to $11,256,598, compared with $11,575,858, a decrease of $319,260, or about 2.5 per cent.

The company's tax accruals for June were $618,842, or $63,637 less than for June, 1934, and for the six months, $3,869,664, or $203,939 less than for the first half of last year.

Steel Demand Grows Over Wide Front

New York, July 28 (AP).—Increases in steel demand over a wide front are cited by the American Metal Market. Some further rail buying has developed in both the Chicago and Pittsburgh sections, it is stated. "Operations of the tin plate mills is unexpectedly heavy, resulting in rush orders for sheet bars," the review notes.

Madison Square Garden Declares 15c Dividend

New York, July 28 (AP).—Madison Square Garden Corporation declared a dividend of 15 cents on the capital stock, payable August 30 to stock of record August 15.

This is the first dividend since July 15, 1931, when 75 cents was paid.

Business Defeats Politics, Nears Prosperity, Survey Says

Canvass Indicates That Trade This Autumn Will Be at Highest Level for Five Years; Relief Not Rated Important Factor.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, July 28.—American business is entering a period of comparative prosperity, a United Press survey showed tonight.

Bitterly as most industrialists rail against the major policies of the New Deal, they, nevertheless believe that the forces of "natural" recovery have triumphed over political barriers, and that business this fall will reach the highest level for any similar period since 1930.

This does not mean that a return to the boom days of 1928 and 1929 is expected momentarily. It does mean that corporation earnings should exceed those in any year since 1931; that heavy industry—particularly steel production and building construction—is anticipating a sharp extra seasonal rise in the next few months, and that the pay envelope of the salaried man and the wage earner will probably be fatter than it has been for several years.

Unemployment Wide.

Meanwhile there is little prospect of a substantial decrease in the huge burden of Federal relief. Estimates of the number of unemployed range from 7,000,000 to 12,000,000 out of a population of 125,000,000. Whatever the correct figure, it will undoubtedly be reduced as a result of a fall upswing in private industry, plus Government spending from the $4,000,000,000 relief fund. President Roosevelt has predicted that the ranks of the jobless will be thinned materially when operations based on the fund reach their peak, probably in November.

Yet business men generally expect little lasting improvement from this relief spending. They realize instead that the huge Government debt, now at all-time record levels, must ultimately be liquidated either through heavy taxation or inflation. But for the near future they are pushing these worries into the background, and are counting on the natural recuperative forces of American industry to overcome the inertia that has characterized the long depression.

"Good times" are not yet here, but the United States has readjusted itself to a standard of living that does not demand the luxuries of pre-depression days. The pleasures of the American people are simpler than they were six years ago, but they are valued more highly and distributed more widely among those who still have jobs.

Thus a larger number of automobiles is being sold in the United States this year than at any time since 1929, but the proportion of smaller cars has increased sharply in the interval. More Americans are finding it good to get upon the road, but they are traveling in low-priced cars rather than in heavy limousines.

Evolution of Golf.

Similarly, the thousands of golf clubs that dotted the country with velvety links have experienced a heavy decline in memberships that formerly cost several hundred dollars a year. Many of those clubs were forced into bankruptcy as the depression was prolonged.

Others, however, slashed their annual fees, eliminated the charge for initiation and double and tripled their membership lists. Still others threw open their links to outsiders upon payment of a small fee. As a result it is estimated that more people are playing golf in this country today than in 1929, although many are doing so in nondescript attire and at a fraction of the former cost.

Expanded travel is another characteristic of the New Deal. In the last three months the North Atlantic steamship lines have carried about 10 per cent more passengers to Europe than a year ago, while summer travel to Latin America and Bermuda has exceeded all previous records. Almost every summer week-end there is a huge migration from cities to nearby beaches. The number of New Yorkers taking two-week vacations is 800,000 higher this year than at any time since the depression started.

All of this is merely superficial evidence of a halting stride back in the direction of "prosperity," It cannot be accepted as valid proof that the American people have again reached a state of normalcy.

The desire to spend on minor "luxuries" is in part a mental reaction from years of business despondency. Clothing manufacturers, for example, complain that their sales this year have not advanced as much as expected, and ascribe this to a desire to spend extra money for amusements, rather than for necessities.

Pacific Lighting Net Is $4.05, Up From $2.27

General Mills Earns $4.12 Against $3.56 a Share in Preceding Year.

San Francisco, July 28.—Pacific Lighting Corporation, for the 12 months ended June 30, earned $4.05 a share on the outstanding common stock, which compares with $2.27 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Gross revenues for the 12 months ended June 30, 1935, showed an increase of $4,700,863, or 11 per cent over the comparable period of 1934. This was attributable to an increase of 11 per cent in domestic and commercial gas revenues resulting from a greater than normal rainfall and extended cold weather in the first six months of 1935 and a 16 per cent increase in industrial gas revenues. Electric lighting and power revenues increased 6 per cent.

General Mills, Inc., reports for the fiscal year ended May 31, net earnings of $4,075,251, after deductions for depreciation, interest, Federal taxes and the minority interest. This compares with net earnings of $3,710,383 for the preceding fiscal year. Net earnings for the 1935 fiscal year after providing for preferred stock dividend requirements equal $4.12 per share on the 665,054 outstanding shares of no par common stock, compared with $3.56 earned per share during the preceding fiscal year. Net earnings were equivalent to $18.27 per share of preferred stock or slightly in excess of three times the dividend requirements on the 223,057 shares of 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock outstanding.

Current assets as of May 31, 1935, totaled $35,704,956 as against current liabilities of $6,208,364. Cash alone amounting to $7,144,103 was more than sufficient to cover all current liabilities.

The annual report says: "General Mills, Inc., has no funded debt, no bank loans, and no notes payable. Water power rights, good will, trade marks and trade names are carried at the nominal value of $1. During the seven years of unusual economic disturbances since General Mills was organized in 1928, the company has earned and paid regular uninterrupted annual dividends of $3 on its common stock."

Continental Oil Co. and subsidiaries report for the quarter ended June 30 net income of $2,192,888, equivalent to 47 cents a share of capital stock. This compares with $940,807 or 20 cents a share in the preceding quarter.

Ohio Edison Calls $2,915,000 Bonds

New York, July 28.—T. A. Kenny, president of Ohio Edison Co., successor to Northern Ohio Power & Light Co. (formerly the Northern Ohio Traction & Light Co.), has issued a call for redemption on September 1, 1935, at 107½ per cent, $2,915,000 of the outstanding general and refunding mortgage gold bonds, Series A (6 per cent, due 1947) of the Northern Ohio Traction & Light Co. The bonds will be paid at the principal office of City Bank Farmers Trust Co., New York. Interest will cease after September 1.

Simultaneously, City Bank Farmers Trust Co., as trustee, is calling $85,000 of the bonds for the sinking fund, for redemption on the same date and at the aforementioned price.

Agreement Seen as Aid To Stability of Lead

New York, July 28 (AP).—Trade circles are of the opinion that the agreement at London of foreign producers not to step up production without notifying one another should improve the industry's stability.

Stocks of lead in this country at the end of June totaled 231,077 short tons, compared with 225,057 at the end of May and 238,181 at the close of June, 1934, according to the American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

Higher Gasoline Prices Predicted by Survey

New York, July 28 (AP).—Prospects for the balance of the year indicates that the average of gasoline retail prices can be better held than in 1924, Standard Statistics says.

This forecast, the survey bases on a materially higher price level for wholesale gasoline than a year ago and more stringent control of "hot" oil production.

Court Speeds Northwestern Reorganization

Plan Must Be Approved by April 1, Federal Judge Rules.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—Federal Judge John P. Barnes today gave the Chicago & Northwestern Railway eight months in which to file and have approved a reorganization plan under the amended bankruptcy act.

He fixed April 1, 1936, as the deadline. In his ruling, made at the first meeting of stockholders and creditors, he said, "This court will not allow bankruptcy matters to drag as chancery hearings do.

He continued indefinitely an order of June 28 allowing the railroad to remain under its present management without the appointment of trustees and allowed an order permitting payment of $431,000 principal and interest on equipment trust certificates due August 1.

Fred W. Sargent, president of the road, estimated gross revenues for 1935 would total $79,785,000, compared with $75,893,418 in 1934 and an $80,000,000 average for the last five years.

"All indications are that we will have an increase of 15 per cent in our gross income for 1936 over the average for the last five depression years," he said.

"If so we should have $11,596,000 available for interest. If the upturn continues we should have $13,000,000 for interest in 1937, $15,551,000 in 1938, $18,625,000 in 1939 and $19,321,000 in 1940. During that five-year period we propose to pay $8,000,000 a year in interest."

Virginia Faces Top Pork Price

State Estimates That Figure for 1930 Will Be Surpassed.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 28.—The State department of agriculture estimated today that the retail price of pork will rise above the 1930 level this winter although it is slightly lower now.

Farm prices still are $1 below or 89 per cent of 1930 prices, but farm prices plus processing taxes are 116 per cent of 1930 figures, Henry H. Taylor, crop statistician, said.

In Richmond the average retail price of sliced ham was 43.6 on July 15, 1930, 38.9 in 1931, and now is 40.2 cents per pound. Pork chops were 36.1 in 1930, 31.6 in 1931 and now are 35.1. Sliced bacon was 39.2 in 1930, 33.6 in 1931 and now is 39.7.

The Virginia farm price as of July 15 was 8.10 per 100 pounds compared to $9.10 in 1930 and $7 in 1931. The current farm price plus processing tax is $10.60, however.

Agricultural officials predicted the supply of hogs for slaughter beginning in July would be smaller than the year previous and that the average of hog prices will be higher than the average for 1934-35 but lower than the season's peak prices.

The Federal Reserve Bank's trade report for the Fifth District showed today that groceries, hardware and drugs listed a sales increase for the first six months of the year as compared with the same period of 1934. Dry goods and shoes register declines.

Groceries were up 6.2 per cent; hardware, 7.5 per cent, and drugs, .6 per cent. Dry goods were down 17.2 per cent and shoes dropped 13.5 per cent.

Toronto, July 28.—July dividend payments by Canadian corporations, as reported to E. A. Pierce & Co., members of the Toronto and New York stock exchanges, were the highest for any similar month since 1931. Disbursements were made during the month on upwards of 150 securities, and the total was 7.2 per cent above July, 1934, and 31 per cent above July two years ago.

Total payments are estimated at $18,902,566 as contrasted with estimate of $17,632,095 for July, 1934, and $13,580,939 for July, 1933. Distributions for the first seven months of 1935 of $124,851,225 were 8 per cent greater than those of $114,866,305 for corresponding months of 1934, and 47 per cent above the $84,325,077 reported for first seven months 1933.

Cotton Corner Now Being Held By Government

Total Financed by U. S. Is 6,000,000 Bales of 7,000,000 Supply.

By the Associated Press.

Washington, July 28.—Cotton may still be king but Uncle Sam expects to be the power behind the throne. The approach of the new cotton season finds the Federal Government holding what some officials say amounts to a virtual temporary corner on leading grades in the domestic supply.

Cotton statisticians figure the Government-financed supply when the old season ends this week will approximate 6,000,000 out of a total domestic supply of around 7,000,000 bales. The world supply of American cotton is estimated to be less than 9,000,000 bales.

Until the new crop begins to move to market in volume, some experts contend the Government may be in position to gets its price from the mills.

Meanwhile, behind the scenes, cotton has been the subject of much debate and thinking in official quarters. The South's chief staple is a touchstone for some of the New Deal's hardest problems—foreign trade, crop control, and what to do with an accumulated surplus.

Under the 12-cent loan of the past season, growers were reported to have turned in nearly 4,500,000 bales, or about half of last year's crop. The latest figure of Government loans against these exceed $221,000,000.

Debate for the moment pivots on how much should be loaned on new cotton. The 12-cent loan was considered by many too high, although it was under the prevailing market at the time it was announced.

Pepco Income Off During '35

June Earnings Increase Slightly Over Same 1934 Month.

Despite a gain in net income during June, earnings of the Potomac Electric Power Co. during the first six months of 1935 were below the same period of 1934, it was revealed yesterday.

During the past month the power company's net was $317,711, while during June of 1934 net income was reported at $315,076, a gain of $2,635.

For the first six months of 1934 the net income was $2,031,965.33, which fell off to $2,015,579.54 for the first half of this year, a drop of $16,205.79.

Operating revenue rose from $991,557.99 in June, 1934, to $1,057,155.22 in June, 1935, a gain of $65,597.23, or 6.62 per cent.

For the first six months of last year operating revenue was $6,005,477.90, rising to $6,542,958.36 for the first half of this year, a gain of $537,480.46, or 8.95 per cent.

Net operating income rose from $390,948.76 in June, 1934, to $400,225.88 in June, 1935, a gain of $9,277.12, or 2.37 per cent.

Steel Industry Forges Rise In Production to 45 Per Cent

Fabricators Are Increasing Stocks of Raw Material; Consumers Are Anticipating Requirements, Looking Further Into Future.

Cleveland, July 28.—A general expansion in steel demand now appears to be under way, few consuming industries failing to show some measure of improvement, states the magazine Steel.

Users are anticipating requirements, for larger tonnages, and further ahead. Steelmakers themselves are increasing stocks of raw steel.

Due principally to these factors, steel ingot production last week rose 2 points to 45 per cent, highest since the last week in April, notwithstanding that Ford plants, as well as many automobile partsmakers and other manufacturers shut down or prepared to suspend for vacations and midyear inventories.

Steelmakers are convinced that the low point in steel production for the year has been passed, and that the industry shortly will overtake the rate of 54½ per cent at which it was operating early in February.

Reflecting the buoyant feeling in the market, scrap prices last week advanced again, 50 cents to $1 a ton. Steel's scrap composite moved up 62 cents, the sharpest rise this year, to $11.25. Demand for semi-finished steel and pig iron was stronger. Tin plate output increased 10 points to 90 per cent. Galvanized sheet production rose to 60 per cent, on farm and construction requirements; though full-finished sheets, used largely by the automobile industry, dropped 5 points to 40 per cent.

Automobile assemblies for the week held practically unchanged at 83,000 units. That industry's efforts to level out peaks and valleys in production by advancing new models, with a favorable market, appears to be having a similar effect on steel. Substantial tonnages were placed last week for the new models.

Ford Needs 140,000 Tons.

Ford's inquiry for upward of 140,000 tons of steel, with which it is trying to develop special prices, still pends, though Ford made a large routine commitment for cold-rolled sheets at the established market. Chevrolet will buy steel for 100,000 cars next month.

Industrial and commercial building construction is increasing. The 21,000 tons of structural shape awards for this purpose in July represents 35 per cent of the total, whereas the proportion in prior months this year was 22 per cent. Total awards last week declined to 5,600 tons. The works relief program has not yet developed any important inquiries.

Fabricated structural steel prices are firming up, now that fabricators are filing all bids with the American Institute of Steel Construction. On the other hand, since reinforcing bar fabricators relinquished their code prices $1.50 to $2.50 under the market have been reported bid on Government work.

Los Angeles is taking bids on 72,470 tons to 104,640 tons of reinforcing bars for the Colorado River aqueduct, largest inquiry for this material in the history of the Pacific Coast.

50,000 Tons for C. & O.

Carbuilders closed last week on practically all the 50,000 tons of steel for 5,125 Chesapeake & Ohio freight cars, and for more than 6,000 tons for 500 New York subway cars. Norfolk Southern awarded 500 all-steel box cars. Argentine state railways are inquiring for 1,000 box cars, requiring 12,000 tons of steel. Missouri Pacific purchased 10,000 tons of rails.

As in industrial building construction, steelmakers themselves are among the leaders in new equipment orders. Bethlehem Steel Co. has placed a $5,000,000 cold-rolled tin mill for its Sparrows Point, Md., plant, and Republic Steel Corporation is to rebuild its Stark sheet mill division, Canton, Ohio. A special board has reported that $25,000,000 worth of machine tools is needed by the Navy.

Pittsburgh district steelworks last week advanced 3 points to 41 per cent; Cleveland, 7 to 48; Youngstown, 3 to 49. New England was down 4 to 32, and others unchanged.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is up 13 cents to $32.55, due to advances in scrap, while the finished steel index remains $54.

Heavy Industry Revival Cheers Wall Street

Domestic Developments Outweigh Foreign Disturbances.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 28.—Although Europe's financial nerves tightened last week on tugs from Holland and Italy, observers of the domestic scene scanned the period ahead from the platform of higher security prices.

Somewhat better sentiment was discernible among analysts of trade and industry. They ascribed it principally to the growing pains indicated in the heavy industries.

Reports of steel industry surveys lent weight to the view that steel operations are gradually benefiting by demand from diverse sources, and observers viewed this as symptomatic of a firm tone ahead.

The argument advanced by Wall street economists was the same as that of recent weeks: That industrial plant and equipment is badly worn down in many instances and that new steel is needed to make up the deficit.

After a study of industrial earnings reports which had as their high spot stout improvement for the motor and motor accessory group and for some steel and electrical equipment units, Wall street took a look at financial currents as affected by developments across the water.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, July 28.

THE most popular flicker flaw of the month—it was the one noticed by the majority of picture fans—is in "Becky Sharp." It is at the end of the flicker and Miriam Hopkins is in her small room in the cheap boarding house. There is a large window in Miss Hopkins' room, and as you look through the window you can see a number of people walking—atmosphere in the background. Therefore, writes Marcella Judge, one of the many, we are led to believe that Miss Hopkins lives on the ground floor.

But when the visitors arrive to visit Miss Hopkins, they have to walk up a flight of stairs to get to her room, and when she throws the book out of the window it is evident that her apartment is on the second floor, at least. Therefore those people seen walking must have been doing it on thin air. Color doesn't confuse the fans. They still find their movie boners.

She takes her dive into the pool, writes Edna Norman, and when she comes out she is met by Edward Everett Horton. She immediately picks up a bottle of a sun tan lotion and begins rubbing herself with the liquid. It was awfully nice of that bottle to appear suddenly before Miss Del Rio wanted it. Guess Dolores Del Rio can get practically anything she wants when she is in a bathing suit.

PICTURE audiences believe it is a flaw if a song written later than the period of the picture is used in a flicker. In "Public Hero No. 1," Jean Arthur is sitting in a hotel lobby and the orchestra can be heard playing "Everything's Been Done Before." Julia Thompson says that the newspapers flashed on the screen plainly show the date to be 1934, and this is done to impress the audience that the story is about Dillinger. Yet the song, "Everything's Been Done Before," was written for the flicker, "Reckless," and was not heard until several months ago.

This is easily explained. Both are Metro pictures, and every company always tries to use music they own, for then it won't cost them anything, and also they try to plug their latest songs in flickers whenever possible. Certainly they can't be blamed for this.

George Brent, in "Front Page Woman," writes Edward Singer, makes a telephone call and doesn't complain because he gets his number. While Brent is phoning, there is a background scene of Columbia Circle showing a large electric sign to make it clear that Brent is doing his phoning to New York.

Yet Brent only turns the dial five times and gets his number. In New York one must turn the dial seven times to complete the contact for a phone call. George Brent probably has his own system.

"In Alibi Ike," says Bert Hudson, when Joe E. Brown goes to the gamblers to get his money in advance, he is wearing a felt hat. When Joe E. returns and steps from the cab he is wearing a hat, but not the same one. It seems that Joe E. Brown can do more tricks with a hat than Fred Keating can do with a bird and cage.

* * * *

WILLIAM POWELL, in "Escapade" walks into the ball sequence and offers a gum drop to a lady, explaining that he never smokes. This was very amusing, writes Sam Berman, who believed that the gum drops would be a running gag throughout the flicker.

Soon after, however, Powell meets Luise Rainer and he is seen smoking a cigarette, forgetting completely about his remark of never smoking.

In "The Florentine Dagger," Margaret Lindsay grabs her suitcase and hurriedly enters a cab. But when she leaves the taxi, claims Vivienne Chassler, she is seen without the suitcase.

Paul Lukas in "The Age of Indiscretion" is supposed to have been awakened from a good night's sleep, writes L. Rabin. Yet when Lukas gets up his hair is neatly combed.

* * * *

Now, if you know Long Island, you know there are no mountains there. Those movie producers are certainly wonderful—they can move mountains.

Audit Bureau Busy Checking Virginia Books

Department Drafting Its Reports, Installing New System for Road Unit.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 28.—Vacations may be the order of the day for most State employes now, but for the auditing department it is one of the busiest seasons of the year.

With reports on the finances of five Virginia counties for the fiscal year 1933-34 being typed to complete that phase of the work, State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs has set his accountants to analyzing balance sheets for the period ended June 30.

Those who aren't on that assignment are installing a new and more thorough accounting system for the highway department and its offices in every section of the State, inspecting the books of the State's 90-odd trial justice courts, or rounding out other audits in finished form for submission to Gov. Perry.

Darfting Comments.

Downs is engaged in drafting pertinent comments on the most comprehensive audit ever made of the highway department, which does by far the largest dollars-and-cents business of any State division, and writing his annual report on the activities of his 32 field auditors and 10 other staff workers.

The first annual audit of the ABC board, which did a gross business of approximately $13,000,000 to June 30, with a net profit of about $3,500,000, has been tabulated and is being printed to meet many advance requests for copies.

A report on William and Mary College is one of the several jobs now in process of being typed and bound.

New System Sped.

The highway audit bulks larger than any single task yet tackled by Downs' department, which has been busy on the job for two years. Figures being marshalled were first recorded during the fiscal period ended June 30, 1933, but Downs hopes the new system will enable the residence clerks, district bookkeepers and central office accounting to keep a clear, accurate and modern record of road activities from week to week and month to month.

He and his aids are concentrating their efforts on installing the new system in time to have the highway department's new $13,500,000 State-Federal road program recorded so efficiently that the accounts can speak for themselves at all times.

Society Manages to Keep Cool Though Summering in Capital

The Dabneys Affect Linens and Appear to Weather Washington Heat Well; Sandals Help to Perfect Seasonable Attire of Miss Matheson.

Members of Washington society who must remain in the city for any length of time solve the problem of living in comparative comfort by limiting their activities to those requiring practically no exertion whatever and by wearing the delightful summertime clothes that feel almost as cool as they look.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dabney, seen one day last week, were going about all in linens. Mrs. Dabney, who will be remembered as Miss Margaret Armistead Haggerty, before her marriage, wore a frock of uncrushable linen with large brown bone buttons and with it a linen hat banded in brown.

Miss Page Matheson, whose picture is in the center above, was photographed wearing a tailored sports frock which had as its only trimming bright red buttons. Her sandals were of linen and she wore no hat. Miss Matheson is the daughter of Col. J. R. D. Matheson. Miss Janet Oneill, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. John Bradley, Miss Alice Wright, who is the daughter of Mr. G. C. Wright, of Portsmouth, Va., and Miss Beverly Colburn, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. William H. Colburn, were chatting together when the picture at the right was taken.

Bowing to the heat they chose light frocks. Miss Oneill wore a frock of cool chalk blue crepe with a tie of midnight blue taffetta. Her hat is a simple white felt model and her gloves were of crocheted cotton. Miss Wright selected a sea green knit suit and Miss Colburn a brown linen jacket over a white linen frock to wear whiling away an afternoon becomingly.

Mrs. Emory Hackman Honored at Luncheon

Mrs. Emory Hackman, of Fort Sherman, Canal Zone, was the honor guest at a luncheon given by Miss Lina Macatee, daughter of Mrs. Martha Macatee, at her home on Legation street, Saturday.

Other guests at the affair were Mrs. William Dern, Miss Patricia Dent, Miss Kay Morris, Miss Julia Phillips, Miss Phyllis Adelman, Miss Helen Hopkins, Miss Margaret Henderson, Miss Margaret Kelly, Miss Marian Dowling and Miss Jean Najor.

Harmless Dye Darkens Hair Turning Gray

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

THERE'S NO DOUBT about it—gray hair is old-fashioned. Although there used to be a time when coloring the hair was a bit "fast," this notion has long since been relegated to the limbo of forgotten fancies. No longer need you worry about those telltale strands, which so definitely mar a woman's attractiveness, making her look so much older than she really is. Nobody need have gray hair nowadays—there's literally no excuse for it.

That's why we think you will be interested to know about a wonderful remedy for gray hair on sale at a downtown store. It's one of few such products on the market absolutely guaranteed not to harm your hair. Furthermore, it keeps the hair dark, and until the new grows in, you won't have to worry about renewing the treatments. And it's so easy! Just about as difficult as drinking Cordon Rouge champagne. No fuss or preparation ahead of time. You simply apply it to your locks, once, twice, or thrice, depending upon the state of grayness. Furthermore, it resists sun, air, salt water and shampooing, so that you can emerge from bath or day on the beach knowing that you haven't suddenly become gray all over again. It can be used just as successfully, too, on hair which has previously been dyed. Pure, colorless, and odorless, it costs only 98 cents.

New Ice Crusher Handy.

DID you ever chase a cake of ice around your kitchen sink, ice pick in hand and fury in your soul? If so, you know that there is nothing quite so aggravating as the hacking and wacking necessary to induce a chunk to sit still and let itself be chopped to bits.

All this effort is really quite unnecessary, however, because for only $1 you can treat yourself to the handiest little ice crusher you ever saw. It's made of glass, with a nickel top, and decorated with smart blue stripes. It's extremely practical, as it can also be used as a drink mixer.

Brow Tweezers That Work.

AN eyebrow tweezer that really grips is our latest discovery in beauty gadgets. A combination scissors and tweezer, with a scissors handle, this little implement is the neatest trick in this line we've seen in a long, long time. The scissors part enables the plucker to get a firm hold, thus eliminating the slipping and sliding one has to cope with in the ordinary tweezer. The fact that you can get a firm hold on the tweezer makes it much easier to jerk out the hairs, so that the process is much quicker and lesss painful than usual. It is death on ingrowing hairs, which produce that unattractive pimply condition. The price is only 25 cents.

New Dress For Old.

ARE YOU GETTING a bit tired of your summer frocks? Do you yearn for something new and different, yet feel that it is too late in the season for a new summer dress and still too early for fall wear? If so, we've got just the happy compromise for you. A downtown store is having a sale of the most adorable collars and cuffs we ever saw, formerly priced at $2 and now reduced to only $1 for the set. They come in delectable pastel shades, which make you feel cooler and fresher just to look at them. Pale lemon yellow, baby pink, and dazzling white are some of the attractive colors we saw. They're made of mousseline de soie, the ideal material for summer wear, as it always looks cool and unrumpled.

Washable Ties.

ALTHOUGH A NECKTIE makes neither a new nor a very exciting gift for brother or best beau, we've found some ties that are so attractive and original that your gentlemen friends will receive them with open arms and jack-o-lantern grins of delight. They're made of a swell material called streamlined seersucker, meaning that they can be thrown into a tub when the slightest dirt spot appears, and that they'll come out looking just as fresh as when you bought them. They come in all sorts of colors and attractive designs, and are very, very new. You can get 4 for 50 cents.

Blouses Reduced.

THE SAME STORE has some grand crepe de chine and georgette blouses, reduced from $3.00 to $1.50. Now is the ideal time to snap up bargains in blouses to use with your fall suit, or to freshen up your summer skirts. And you can believe your shop hound when she says that these are real bargains. There've been so many of them sold already that only those who wear a 34 or a 36 need apply. They range all the way from smart little tailored numbers to frilly, frothy, lacy models. If you're the tailored type, you'll love the ones we saw, with glass buttons down the front and finely stitched pleats.

Send a two-cent stamp today for a resume of summer aids to beauty recommended by this column in the past two weeks. Names of shops where products may be purchased are given in this leaflet. Address Miss Davis in care of The Post.

Gleanings from Current Verse

Morning After.

OPEN THE window, let the cool air blow through the rooms,
Clear out the talk that hung in the smoke of the cigarettes,
All that remains of the night, the warm glances, the fumes
Of furtive possession, the intimate touch, and the cloying regrets.

They were scattered and dropped with the ashes swept to the hearth,
The sharp brittle laughter broke and spilled with the wine;
The vague hungry passions were empty when run to the earth,
By the hounds of the music, following close with a rhythmical whine.

I have washed my hands in cold water and bathed my face,
And flung the evening away like shreds of a tattered gown,
But never to burn with a false flame, nor in such dark shallow eddies to drown.

Riders.

THE SEA is riding south today, wind-driven,
The wild white squadron, shoulder-deep in foam,
A jocund haste astride their serried order,
A bright unrest—the curse of all who roam.

Who has not seen them coursing out the tempest?
Confronted rashly through the jealous spray
The sudden pallor of their sea-bleached faces,
Lit with the hazard of their Viking play . . .

You who has listened to their deep-sea laughter
Above the muffled surf at turn of tide—
Have you not yearned to leap the baffling breaker—

Undying.

THRILLING and strong the pipes' consonant shiver.
Swelling, the anthem storms the bastioned skies,
Poises a moment—one—on wings that quiver,
Then plunges downward, while the music dies.

Dearest, the tones of earth are all about us.
Lovely the fields where soft the sunlight lies.
What shall we say when song and youth shall flout us?
How can we bear it, when the music dies?

Still lies a region, far beyond the mountains,
Whither the secret soul of memory flies,
Where flashing songs forever spring, like fountains,
And youth lives on, and music never dies.

Silver Song.

YOUR LOVE was only silver,
And I wanted gold;
The foil of mine was gleaming,
The mint of yours was cold.

I went into the treasury
And lifted piles of gold;
Only half of that in silver
Was all that I could hold.

I know the coins of love,
And what my heart will hold,
Your love was only silver,
—I wanted gold.

A Willow Whistle.

CLOUD-SHIPS are riding the rainbow billows
Of sky, and wind waves the plumes of willows.
Quick life tingling and fresh sap flowing
Up to the sun and a new world growing!
A meadow lark spills his notes like dew
And pauses as if they were all too few
To express the moment; a bob-o-link shakes
His bough of song and a splendor wakes
Across the air, and over the hill
Where willows dance and the grass is cool
A willow whistle is clear and shrill,
Blown by a boy on his way to school.

Calling to dreams—how long ago!
And lips remember and shape to blow,
Tasting the tang of the tender bark
And sweet white wood of the willow . . . Hark,
How the notes pipe clear and the echoes are sped—
Calling to dreams . . . how far ahead!

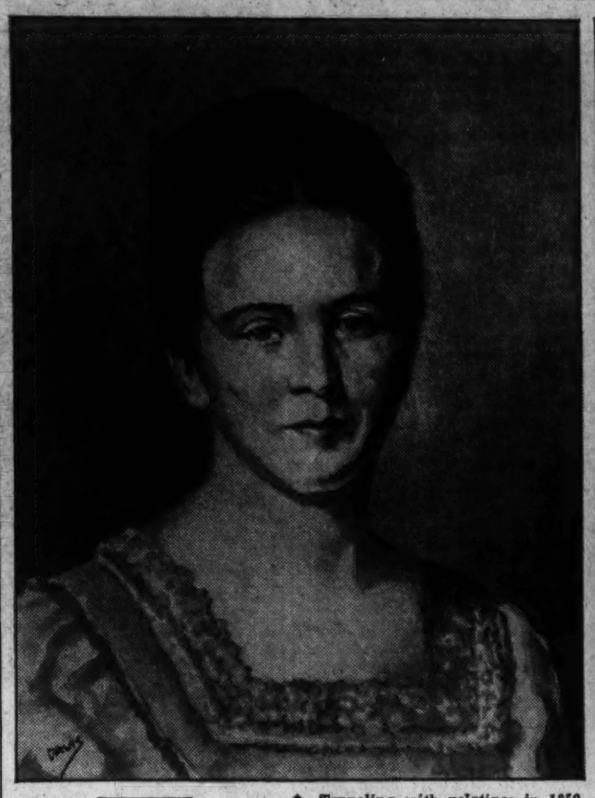
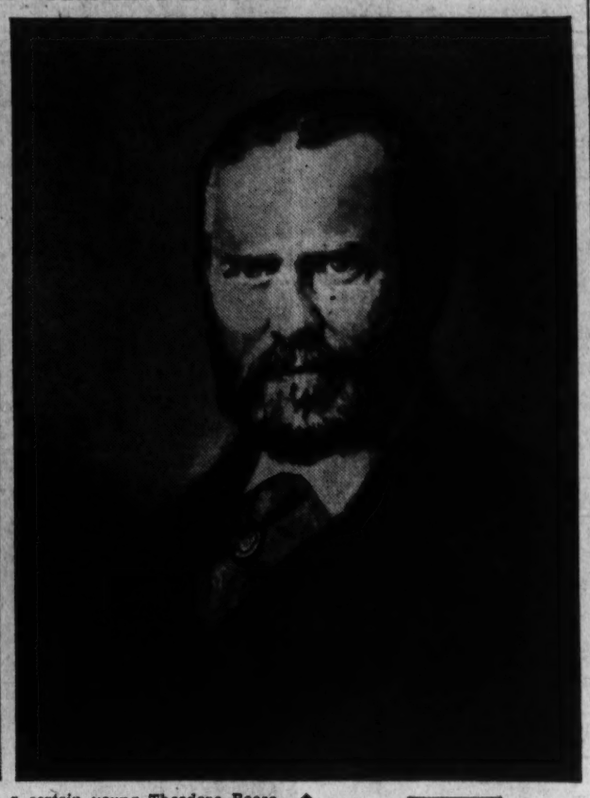
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Theodore Roosevelt—Martha Bullock.





Traveling with relatives in 1850, a certain young Theodore Roosevelt, then 19 years of age, met a lovely young belle of Georgia, daughter of a distinguished Southern family, with whom he fell headlong in love. The girl was Martha Bullock. On December 22, 1853, they were married; and on October 27, 1858, a son was born to them. He, too, was named Theodore, and he became President of the United States.

Georgia Beauty Takes Touching Part in Family History.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

THERE is a certain Dutch worthy in the halls of Valhalla who must experience a sense of satisfaction as he surveys the exploits and achievements of his decendants, that among them are numbered two Presidents of the United States—Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

This sturdy Dutchman is Claes Martenszen Van Rosenvelt whose pioneer spirit and love of adventure led him in 1644 to set his face to the New World and thus found the Clan Roosevelt in the United States.

In the mammoth Dutch Bible, one of Claes' prized possessions as he left his native Zeeland, was written down that Claes had married a buxom village belle, Jannetje. Jannetje was a brave soul and while she may have had qualms at the venture into the unknown, she probably never displayed it.

After they arrived in New Amsterdam, as New York City was then called, Claes and Jannetje had four daughters and one son, Nicholas. This same Nicholas was the great-great-great-great-grandfather of both the Roosevelt presidents.

Nicholas Takes a Bride.

Nicholas Roosevelt married Heyltje Jans Kunst in 1682, according to an entry in the huge family Bible. Nicholas and the picturesquely named Heyltje had three sons, Nicholas, Jacobus and Johannes. One of Jacobus' descendants, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, sits in the White House today.

Johannes Roosevelt, born in 1689, had a son, Jacobus, whose son, James Roosevelt, was in turn blessed with a son, Cornelius, who was born in 1794. And this Cornelius Roosevelt, it may be said in passing, was the grandfather of Theodore Roosevelt, the President.

To Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Van Shaack Roosevelt in their comfortable home at Broadway and Fourteenth street, New York, their youngest son, Theodore, was born in 1831.

There was considerable money in the family and young Theodore was given a good education, then went into his father's glass importing business. But before all this happened another event took place while on a trip through the South that was to change the whole course of his life.

Traveling with a relative in 1850, when but 19 years old, he was taken to call on a family named Bullocks, living in a colonial mansion at Roswell, Ga.

The Bullocks were persons of importance in their community and visitors from other States counted it a high-point of their stay in Georgia when taken to Roswell House, nestling in its classic beauty among the green hills.

Then Theodore Roosevelt, son of Cornelius, was brought to Roswell House, among those introduced to him was the daughter of the house, Martha, a 15-year-old girl of surpassing loveliness of feature.

Gentle, rather calm of nature, Martha Bullock had both charm and grace and Theodore Roosevelt, future father of the President-to-be, found when he had returned to the North that he could not forget the southern maiden he had seen but once. For weal or for woe he had left his heart in Georgia.

On her part it became apparent that Martha appreciated the qualities in the young northerner that later was to win for him this tender tribute from his son, Theodore:

Roswell House Rejoices.

A year later Theodore Roosevelt returned to Georgia and visited Roswell once more. He was warmly welcomed and little Martha now 16 and beautiful with the early bloom of Southern women greeted him shyly but gladly.

Plantation music, the fragrance of old-fashioned flower and herb gardens wrought their magic and the two were in love—the 20-year-old man from the North and the 16-year-old girl from the South.

On December 22, 1853, three days before Christmas Roswell was aglow with wedding gaiety. Martha had said "yes" to Theodore Roosevelt and the plantation was prepared to celebrate the happy occasion.

Back to New York Theodore Roosevelt took his bonny bride. Their home was made at 28 East Twentieth street, a three-story house within easy walking distance of Gramercy Park. The southern Mrs. Roosevelt got on well with her husband's friends and presided over his home as Henry Pringle, biographer of Roosevelt says, "with distinction."

The cycle of life went on for the young Roosevelts, and it was October of 1858 and a child was expected in the Roosevelt family. On October 27 a son was born to them whom they named Theodore, jr. Little they dreamed who gazed at the somewhat puny child in his cradle that this was to be the first Roosevelt to be a President of the United States.

Death Overwhelms Youth.

Theodore Roosevelt was an undergraduate at Harvard University with the death of Theodore Roosevelt sr. on February 9, 1878. The son stricken by the blow wrote: "The last few days seem like a hideous dream. Father had always been so much with me that it seems as if a part of my life had been taken away."

Gentle Martha Bullock survived her husband by six years. For the last four years of it she rejoiced in the fact that her son, Theodore, had married the lovely Alice Lee, of Boston, with whom she is said to have felt a mystic kinship of spirit.

Then came that fateful day, February 12, 1884, when Alice Lee Roosevelt gave birth to a daughter named for her, Alice Lee Roosevelt, who is now Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, as her beloved mother-in-law lay dying in another room in the same house. By 2 o'clock of that day she had joined her in death and Theodore Roosevelt had lost his mother and his wife on the day his eldest child had been born.

Death Strikes Harshly to Break Ties of Presidential Kin.

Fish Like 'Bait' Tied With Hair Of Light Color

IT SEEMS that anglers prefer blondes too—and the blonder the better. Light hair used in the tying of artificial flies is said to have a devastating attraction for fish.

At least that's what they're saying in Wellington, New Zealand. A mother with a small son entered a hairdresser's salon there and asked the barber to remove six locks of the boy's long, silky, platinum blond hair. As each lock was clipped the woman placed it in a stamped addressed envelope. She then explained that her boy's hair was ideal for making flies for fishing.

"Fisherman who use his hair say the fish take the flies made from it quicker than any other," she added.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Reader Asks List of Books on Child Training; Tip to "M. H. G."

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I would like to make a suggestion to the young wife and mother whose letter, signed "M. H. G.," was printed in your column Saturday, July 20. She was asking for some suggestion as to how she could earn money at home.

It occurs to me that since she herself is the mother of three children, she doubtless understands children and knows how to care for them. And since they are buying their home, they probably have at least a small yard.

There are many mothers who want some safe and dependable place to leave their children for a few hours each day. "M. H. G." might start a small-scale day nursery school. This would require very little expenditure. A few childrens' books, a sand box and a few inexpensive toys will do. I know a woman who is making a good living for herself doing this.

The business arrangements need to be worked out by the individual, of course, but in case "M. H. G." has had no business training, here are a few suggestions: Charges are usually made on the basis of an hourly rate for those mothers who want to leave their children for an occasional afternoon; a weekly rate is usually made for working mothers, who want day-time care of their children.

NOW may I please say a word about the radio programs? Both my husband and I find the majority of today's radio programs so offensive that we rarely turn on our radio any more. The advertising is so insistent and so incessant that it is just too much; the claims so extravagant that no one could take the advertisers seriously. But our chief objection is to the type of cheap music that is broadcast most of the time.

When there is so much good music which might be offered, it seems a shame we hear so little of it over the radio. I believe the majority of persons would rather hear a good disk recording than listen to a poor vocalist singing a worse "popular" song.

* * * *

NOW, for my last objective in writing to you: Can you recommend some good books on child training? I would be so grateful if you could give me the names of some especially good books that convey an understanding of children and guide the parent in teaching them how to grow into happy and useful human beings. Thanking you, I am,

MRS. F. L.

Books Listed by Expert.

DEAR MRS. F. L.: Thank you for the sensible suggestion to M. H. G." Your comment on present day radio programs is interesting. As for recommended books on child training, the following are suggested by Adelia Boynton Heiney, director of the National Child Research Center, 3209 Highland place northwest:

"Parents and the Pre-School Child," by W. E. Blatz and H. Bott, a practical discussion of guidance in habit formation for young, normal children; "Home Guidance for Young Children," by Grace Langdon, a handbook for parents which combines modern psychological and educational principles with concrete suggestions and illustrative material.

* * * *

"Normal Youth and Its Everyday Problems," by D. A. Thom, which discusses the parent-child relationship in its positive and negative aspects as a factor in the physical, emotional and intellectual maturing of youth; "Growing Up," by Karl de Schweinitz, a simple description of the processes of reproduction, written for children but informative for parents; and "Busy Childhood," by J. C. Foster, a book which shows the importance of play and other desirable occupations in the development of personality.

* * * *

Mrs. Heiney believes the modern parent who wishes to keep a step ahead of his child must regularly read at least one good magazine devoted to a consideration of child rearing problems. She suggests "Child Study" or "Parent Magazine."

BALANCED MENUS for TODAY

By Dorothea Duncan.

MENUS that suggest very little work are the ones we find most interesting this time of the year. They don't need to be helter-skelter affairs without balance or attraction if they are planned in the right way.

When planning your menus during the hot weather, try to do at least a day's menus in advance, looking for dishes that can be prepared in the morning and stored in the refrigerator until time for serving.

If there is any part of the day that might send out a cool breeze it will be early in the morning. This, then, is the time to do most of the actual food preparation for the day. And to give you a helping hand in the right direction, we are suggesting the following menus for today (or tomorrow, if you prefer):

BREAKFAST.

Human Heart's Work Capacity Shown by Test

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

HOW much work should the heart be called upon to perform? Strenuous athletic contests have repeatedly demonstrated that the muscles of the body, including the heart muscle, can function to an unprecedented degree. As long as the heart can secure an adequate supply of oxygen and nourishment huge overloads may be borne by this powerful organ. It appears to be a question of available oxygen and food. If either is slow in reaching the muscle fibers fatigue symptoms will quickly develop and collapse may occur.

For a considerable period physicians have been searching for a simple method of measuring the work efficiency of the heart, and A. M. Master has described recently a revision of his two-step test.

With the assistance of a colleague, a set of tables was prepared, indicating the number of steps which the normal individual could ascend in a given time without increasing the heart rate more than ten beats per minute. For example, he found that a man between the ages of 20 and 24, weighing between 130 and 139 pounds, was able to make 25 ascents without appreciable increase of the heart rate or blood pressure. Calculations have been made for all ages and weights for both men and women, so that by using the table one can quickly determine the number of steps that are considered a normal climb.

A man, aged 45, weighing between 150 and 159 pounds, should make 21 ascents. A man of the same age weighing 100 pounds should make 19. A woman 40 years old, weighing 130 pounds, should make 20, etc.

Master devised a double stepladder with two steps on each side. Two nine-inch steps provided a total climb of 18 inches. The patient walks up one side of the steps and down the other, turning toward the same side of the room to avoid dizziness. The individual is asked to make the required number of ascents in one and one-half minutes.

Heart efficiency was determined as follows: A woman, aged 53, weighing 156 pounds, should make 17 ascents, according to the table. Inasmuch as some heart disease was known to be present, the patient was first asked to mount the steps but 14 times. When at rest the heart was beating 82 per minute. After the 14 ascents the rate was 96, which exceeded the allowed increase of 10 beats per minute. Hence it was concluded that 14 ascents were too many. Later in the day 12 climbs were attempted. In this test the increase in the heart rate was within the prescribed limits. It was concluded that her heart power was midway between 12 and 14, namely, 13, and the heart efficiency was determined to be the ratio between 13 ascents which she made and the 17 descents which she should have made (thirteenth-seventeenths of normal), or 77 per cent.

Another case was that of a man aged 52, weighing 149 pounds, who had previously suffered a coronary acclusion (blocking of one of the blood vessels to the heart). In his case it was found that he could make 14 ascents as contrasted with a normal of 21, hence his work efficiency was fourteen-twenty-firsts of normal, or 67 per cent.

Without attempting to detail all of Master's experiments, it is obvious that apprehension and general nervousness may decidedly influence the test. Probably no single determination should be considered as conclusive, but an average taken of several performed on different days.

The test need not place the slightest strain upon the heart muscle; in fact, if heart disease is known or suspected, it may be well to start the subject climbing fewer steps, increasing the number at succeeding tests.

If we would save and not overstrain the heart muscle, we must avoid overload and if this principle can be driven home to heart sufferers forcibly enough countless cases of sudden death will be prevented, as well as many distressing instances of heart failure that lead to prolonged invalidism.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

Gambling for Notrump.

Because only nine tricks are required for game in notrump, a good bidding partnership employs many kinds of tactics to steer a final game contract into notrump rather than a minor suit which requires 11 tricks. At times a slight gamble is required, but in the long run it is usually well worthwhile.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A J 10 9 ♡ Q 7 ◇ A Q J ♣ K 10 5 4
♠ K 7 6 3 ♡ A K 8 4 2 ◇ 10 9 5 ♣ 7	N W E S	♠ 8 4 2 ♡ 9 5 3 ◇ 8 7 6 3 ♣ Q J 2
	♠ Q 5 ♡ J 10 6 ◇ K 4 2 ♣ A 9 8 6 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	2♣	2♡
3♣	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

It will be noticed that although notrump as a final contract is preferable to a minor suit, North does not make an opening bid of one notrump. Except with 4-3-3-3 distribution, a major suit contract is preferable to notrump and the opening bid should, if possible, be in a suit in order to explore all the possibilities of the major suits before finally deciding on notrump. North was therefore quite proper in bidding one spade as his opening bid. South's two-club bid also followed the Approach principle. West then overcalled in hearts, his principal purpose being to discourage a contract of three notrump in case North and South did not have the tops in hearts and to direct a lead from East if North should become the eventual declarer. The bid nearly had the desired effect. North could not immediately bid notrump, not having a heart stopper, and was forced to the underbid of three clubs.

This put it clearly up to South to gamble and South was equal to the occasion.

The Play.

West opened the four of hearts and although clubs did not break, South was able, after winning the first trick, to develop nine tricks by finessing for the King of spades.

Gray Silver Dies; Pioneer Farm Leader

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Banker, Political Figure at 65.

Funeral Will Be Held at Martinsburg, W. Va., Wednesday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 28.—Former State Senator Gray Silver, pioneer exponent of the farm cooperative movement, banker and fruit grower, died today of heart disease. He was 65.

Silver was stricken with a heart attack last night, several hours after he returned to his home from a farmers' meeting. Death came at 7:30 a. m.

Funeral services will be conducted at his home at 10 a. m. Wednesday by the Rev. Dr. S. R. Diehl, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, in which Mr. Silver was long a deacon.

Mr. Silver had returned Friday night from Washington in apparently normal health. He visited his farms and orchards in the county yesterday and last night attended a meeting in the county. Shortly before midnight he was stricken. Physicians were unable to give him relief during the night, and he told his family he was aware that his condition was critical.

Studied Farm Economy.

In recent years Mr. Silver had given increasing attention to farm economics and had gradually drawn away from the more political side. He was a pioneer in the farm co-operative field, having spoke throughout the Nation in its support, helped organize co-operatives and prepared and helped to enact State and national farm co-operative laws.

Mr. Silver was a practical farmer himself, owning extensive lands. He was a leading figure in the organization of the American Farm Bureau Federation in 1919, and was named its legislative agent in Washington two years later at a period when the "farm bloc" was making its votes felt in national legislation. He was instrumental in obtaining enactment of some of the measures sponsored by the federation. In 1924 he became head of the United States Grain Marketing Corporation, a $26,000,000 co-operative with headquarters in Chicago that took over the biggest grain-handling firms of the country.

He was for many years powerful in the West Virginia Democratic Party. He was mentioned for the presidential nomination while his work at Washington for the Farm Bureau Federation was in the limelight. In 1928 he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for Governor of West Virginia, but settled the boom that year by filing as a candidate at large to the national convention of the party, supporting Gov. Alfred E. Smith. In 1932 he was mentioned again for Governor, but decided not to make the race, preferring, he said, to look ahead to 1934 for possible entry into the senatorial race. Ill health all that time, however, prevented. He has divided his time between Washington and this city for two years, pressing his economic policies in the Capital as opportunity offered and attending to his private interests here, which included banking and power investments in addition to his agricultural holdings.

He was born at White Hall, Frederick County, Va., February 17, 1870. His father was Col. Francis Silver, third, C. S. A. veteran of four years service with the Confederate Armies. His mother was Mary Anne Gray, of this county.

While Silver was still an infant the family moved to Silver Hill, this county, where the father died while he was 14. He showed an early aptitude for business and set himself up early as a livestock dealer. He came to this city in 1900, and was elected to the West Virginia State Senate in 1906 from this, the Fifteenth District. He served for eight years. During a part of that time he was president of the Senate and as such Lieutenant Governor of the State.

Aided Stock Dealers.

He contributed much in the way of organization and legislation to promote the interest of stock dealers in this district. He was a leader in bringing ranch sheep to the East for breeding purposes and was the prime mover in establishing the first State-owned community packing house at Inwood, W. Va., this county. His farm and orchard properties here were frequently donated by him for experimental work by university and State agencies.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Kate Bishop of this city; five children—Mrs. John Burnside, Madison, W. Va.; Gray, jr., at the home; Mrs. Nathaniel Boyd, recently married, of Grafton, W. Va.; Francis 5th, and Katharine DuBois Silver, at the home; four sisters, Miss Martha Jane Silver at the home; Mrs. Othelia Silver Boyd, of Washington; Mrs. L. C. Hoffman, Bunker Hill, W. Va., and Mrs. L. F. Harper, Winchester, Va.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason, Knight Templar, Elk, member of the National Society, Sons and Daughters of Pilgrims; American Clan Gregor, and National Society, Sons of American Revolution.

Hancock, Md., July 28.—The Hancock Fire Department will stage a week's carnival, opening tomorrow night at City Park, near Hancock High School.

Hospitals List Costs at More Than Budgets

Maryland Institutions Find Charity Cases Cause of Deficit.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 28.—The cost to Maryland hospitals of caring for charity patients during the first nine months of the fiscal year was nearly twice as much as was appropriated by the State for the purpose, figures released today by the Board of State Aid and Charities showed.

The amount earned by the hospitals, on the basis of the cost per day and number of patients, was $473,861. The amount allowed by the State budget was $260,225.

Baltimore hospitals earned $294,708, and were allowed $154,125 from State funds. Other institutions cared for patients at a cost of $179,153, and were given $106,100 from State funds.

Only two hospitals earned less than their State appropriations. These were the St. Marys County Hospital, with an allowance of $2,625 and an expense of $1,024, and the Women's Hospital in Baltimore, which spent $3,561 and was paid $3,750.

An itemized account of the expenditures, and allowances of the various hospitals was given by the board. The total patient-days means the sum of the number of patients multiplied by the number of days they were in the hospital. The cost of caring for one patient for one day was $1.76. The figures follow:

G.O.P. Chiefs See Chances 'Very Bright'

'No New Deal Friends,' They Plan Battle for 1936.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 28.—Optimistic over their party's chances in the 1936 presidential campaign, a group of national and State Republican leaders returned here tonight after a "fishing trip" with Gov. Harry W. Nice.

"All agreed that there is a pronounced and definite trend toward the Republican Party, and all agreed that the Republican chances are very bright," said Nice as spokesman for the group.

An imposing array of Eastern Republicans, headed by Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the national committee, and former U. S. Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, were guests of the Governor on a 36-hour Chesapeake Bay cruise.

Nice said there was no reference in the conferences aboard the State yacht Dupont to the selection of the location for the party's next national convention, and no mention of presidential or vice presidential candidates.

"The whole political field was canvassed without reference to personalities—we didn't get into the question of candidacies," Nice said.

"Everything that was covered was touched in general, and most of the discussions were devoted to the question of organizing the party to carry on the campaign."

The Governor added smilingly that "there were no friends of the New Deal on board."

Last Mill in Harpers Ferry Closes Down Next Saturday

By the Associated Press.

Harpers Ferry, W. Va., July 28.—The last industry in Harpers Ferry will shut down next Saturday.

The management of the Shenandoah Pulp Co. announced operations will cease on that day, throwing out of employment approximately 50 men who have held jobs for 25 or 30 years.

The company pointed to the low price of pulp wood and the condition of the mill's machinery, which has been used for 50 years, as factors in deciding to close the plant.

The plant was purchased several years ago by the Insull interests, which also acquired the light plant, including the water power on both rivers flowing through Harpers Ferry, and a number of other properties.

Both the pulp mill and light plant are under control of the Chase National Bank, of New York.

Maryland Lists 25 Works Jobs As Completed

$21,081,000 to Be Made Available in Second Appropriation.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 28.—Reviewing the work of the old Public Works Administartion under the 1933 appropriation, Abel Wolman, Maryland works administrator, today announced that 25 non-Federal projects had been completed in the State at a cost of $2,880,000.

In addition, work is still proceeding on 16 non-Federal projects whose total cost will be $18,201,800. Three other projects have been approved and received allotments from the old fund, although work has not yet started.

Wolman's figures show that Maryland will receive at least $21,081,000 from the first appropriation, plus the amount of the three additional allotments.

Wolman has received 39 applications for a share of the new $4,880,000,000 appropriation. The total cost of the Maryland program is $21,965,000.

Wolman said that he had been advised that a total of 200 applications from the whole country have been submitted to Washington, and that 2,000 more are under study in the field offices. Those under study involve requests of about $500,000,000, he said.

In the whole country, under the old appropriation, Wolman said, 13,238 projects costing $685,421,693 have been completed. Work is progressing on 4,514 more costing $1,787,187,135. Of the whole amount spent, he said, $1,000,000,000 has gone for materials and $485,000,000 for wages.

Highway Job To Be Filled By Governor

Political 'Organizer' Is Sought by Kump for Key Job.

Charleston, W. Va., July 28.—When he returns to his office here tomorrow from a week-end rest at Elkins, Gov. H. G. Kump is expected to resume consideration of the most important appointment of his administration.

He must name a State road commissioner, a position which has remained vacant since he dismissed Ernest L. Bailey 10 days ago because Bailey allegedly "played politics" instead of building roads.

Road work in the State, including construction of new highways, repairs and maintenance, has been virtually at a standstill for the last two years.

Gov. Kump is credited with having solved the State's financial problems. It was his program that brought the schools back to the nine months' term, solved the deficits of counties, took over on behalf of the State all county roads, created the one-man road commission and established the State-owned liquor store system.

Fight Predicted.

When the Governor removed Bailey he announced to newspaper men that "They have a fight on their hands they never dreamed of." His reference to "they" was to Senators Neely and Rush D. Holt, who now appear to be entrenching themselves in an organization made up of Federal emergency employes.

The split between the Governor and the Neely-Holt group was initiated by Kump, who first served notice that he would not be disposed of by being made a candidate for a Supreme Court judgeship.

It is understood the Governor will act immediately on the road situation to ward off attack by opponents next year.

Appointees Considered.

Gov. Kump is making an intensive study of several men, with the view of selecting one who not only may organize the commission to build and repair roads at once—before winter comes—but one who must be a good political organizer, for the purpose of holding the Democratic Party organization together.

Gov. Kump has not explained why late last week, he dismissed William N. Beehler, who had been West Virginia's emergency relief administrator for nearly two years.

Beehler's removal also was connected with the feud between the Neely-Holt and Kump groups of the party, though it silenced Senator Neely because the Senator, soon after Beehler took office, launched an attack upon him, charged him with favoritism and with being a Republican.

The nearest approach the Governor made to giving a reason for dismissing Beehler was that he wanted a West Virginian to have the post. Beehler is understood to be a native of Baltimore and had done welfare work in Kentucky before Harry L. Hopkins, national relief administrator, sent him to West Virginia.

West Virginians Protesting Bridge as Memorial to Fulton

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., July 28.—A proposal to name a new bridge at Washington for Robert Fulton, inventor of the steamboat, has drawn the opposition of Representative Jennings Randolph and the Rumseyan Society, according to information reaching here, where the matter is of direct historical interest.

Randolph will protest to the District of Columbia Commissioners against this alleged slight to James Rumsey, who, according to the well documented history, piloted a steam propelled boat upstream at Shepherdstown in 1787, 20 years before Robert Fulton drove the Claremont up the Hudson.

Randolph, a member of the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives, will back up his protest with data furnished by the Rumseyan Society of West Virginia, of which Bishop W. L. Gravatt, of Charleston is president and Mrs. Anita Buchanan Speer, of Charleston and Berkeley Springs, is secretary.

Randolph will ask that the bridge be named the Rumsey-Fulton Bridge, instead, doing joint honor to the two experimenters.

James Rumsey spent a lifetime experimenting with driving boats by steam, working for years at Berkeley Springs, then "Bath," where George Washington visited his shop and inspected the boat in construction, and occasionally aided Rumsey with money for his work.

Later, Rumsey transferred his shop to Shepherdstown, where his first successful demonstration was staged on the Potomac River. In the presence of a gathering of notables that included Washington, Rumsey's steam-propelled boat was driven upstream against the strong current, while the crowd cheered. Washington, along with other leading men of the section of that day, made affidavits to what they saw.

Unable to stir more than local enthusiasm, Rumsey went to England, to interest the English navy. There, some time later, when on the verge of another demonstration, he was stricken suddenly and died.

Court at Cumberland Backs Veteran's Will

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 28.—Following a lengthy hearing in Orphans Court, the will of William Walter Orendorf, who died while serving in France during the World War, was upheld.

Orendorf named Mrs. Laverne Logsdon Koontz beneficiary in his $10,000 war-risk insurance policy, but later was informed she was not eligible because she was not a relative. He later wrote a note, assigning the insurance to his sister, Mrs. Nellie C. Kirby, of Zihlman. The note was sent to her after Orendorf died in a French hospital. Mrs. Koontz filed a petition June 14, charging that the note was not a valid will.

$61,000 Waits As Lynchburg Hunts Projects

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lynchburg, Va., July 28.—A Federal allotment of $61,000 made to Lynchburg through the State Highway Department for improvement of primary State highways within the city will go begging if city officials are unable to find projects for which the fund can be used.

All of the streets and avenues of the city used for State thoroughfares are in good condition and there seems to be nothing administration officials can think of.

Lynchburg has approximately 17 miles of its streets under the primary State highway system.

The last allotment from State funds is to be used for construction of a new bridge over the Norfolk & Western Railway belt line at the entrance to Fairview Heights and when that is done there will be no more work here.

Groups to Open Battle to Get Maryland Span

Seven Organizations Seek to Make Political Issue of Bay Ridge.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., July 28.—A. Sydney Turner, past president of the Chestertown Rotary Club and an official of other civic organizations here, in a statement today declared seven Eastern Shore organizations are "taking up the Chesapeake Bay bridge problem with the view of making it a political issue."

Turner said the organizations "cannot understand the noncommittal stand" of Representative T. Alan Goldsborough. He asserted there is no longer any opposition to the bay bridge on the Eastern Shore, and Goldsborough "hasn't even a political motive" in not "getting behind the bridge."

The organizations involved, according to Turner, are the local Rotary Club, the Kent County Chamber of Commerce, Hurlock Chamber of Commerce, Ocean City Chamber of Commerce, Salisbury Chamber of Commerce, the Eastern Shore Travelers Association and the directors of the Del-Mar-Va Association.

The latter organization, he said, is defunct, but its board of directors has continued activity.

"A concerted drive to get Goldsborough and Maryland Senators behind the bridge officially is to be opened immediately," Turner said. "We are going to make it a political issue."

He added that if South Carolina can obtain $37,000,000, of which 45 per cent is an outright grant and the balance a PWA loan, he cannot see why Maryland can not obtain $10,000,000 under similar conditions.

Ruling Alters Liabilities in Bank Closing

Stockholders Are Made Responsible First to Creditors.

Transfer of Stock Does Affect Debt, Judges Decide.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 28.—The stockholder of a bank is responsible to the creditor, not to the banking institution itself, and such liability to a creditor is not ended by the transfer of stock, Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge Frank G. Wagaman ruled in an opinion handed down yesterday in the question of the liability of stockholders of the Peoples Banking Co., of Smithsburg, Md.

"There is individual responsibility of the stockholder to the creditor who became such during such individual stockholding, and this libaility is not ended by the transfer of stock," the court ruled in a decision which is considered far reaching and if upheld by the court of appeals will affect every stockholder of Maryland banking institutions which closed several years ago.

The decisions rescinds and revokes the decree of June 19, 1933, requiring each stockholder of the bank to pay to the receiver an amount equal to the par value of the stock held by him and also revokes the decree ordering the bank commissioner to proceed by law with the collection of assessments against the stockholders of record.

Liability Fixed.

In interpreting Section 39, of Article 3 of the Constitution, the court said that it feels that it gives to creditors and imposes upon stockholders direct and immediate responsibility to be enforced between themselves, the right for a creditor to pursue a stockholder, and to place upon the stockholder liability for the debts of the bank incurred while the stockholder was such, the right of the creditor and responsibility of stockholders to continue, notwithstanding the stockholders transfer of his stock to another, the liability of the stockholder to be an asset of the creditor and not an asset of the corporation.

The opinion further states that a stockholder, if he foresees a failure and rids himself of the stock, does not rid himself of the liability present when he owned the stock and existing at the time of the bank's failure.

Law Interpreted.

"Not only is there no indication in section 39, article 3, that it was intended to make liable only stockholders of record at the time of the insolvency of the bank, but it affirmatively appears by the repetition of the language already interpreted as intended not to do so," the opinion states.

In referring to two recent court of appeals decisions the opinion said it was not unmindful of those which held stockholders liable to assessment, but neither says what stockholders are liable, not for the benefit of what creditors was there such liability. These cases were heard and decided on the theory of liability and the constitutional provision was not under attack, the opinion stated.

An opinion brought through the stockholders of the closed Hagerstown Bank & Trust Co., involving some of the same issues, is expected this week.

With Shirley Povich

Wotta Kress.

New York, July 28.

SITTING here in the Yankee Stadium press box during the double-header between Washington and New York, we have just seen a sight that by all odds should stir the soul of a poet.

It is the second inning of the second game, and Ralph (Red) Kress has just hit a home run high into the left field bleachers to put Washington into a 1-to-0 lead. Certainly there is nothing in such a mundane event as a home run that calls for the expression of the noble emotions by the medium of language, which I think is poetry's best accepted definition, but when that home run is hit by Red Kress in these times, well, some sentiment, at least should hold sway.

POVICH.

Because Red Kress came out of the depths of despond to climax the latest chapter of a glorious comeback with that home run. His is the story of the man who got one more chance in his darkest hour and seized upon it with a fervor and determination that has become a pretty romance of the big leagues.

That home run that Kress hit was his tenth hit in 17 times at bat since they called him out of the shadows of the minor leagues in a Washington infield emergency five days ago. Given that one more chance, he has re-established himself so firmly on the Washington ball club that Manager Bucky Harris shudders at the thought of what might have been the Nats' plight without Red Kress.

LAST Wednesday Kress was a washed-up big leaguer. Owner Clark Griffith, of the Nats, turned him away from the practice before the Washington club's double-header with Cleveland, and ordered him to report to Chattanooga. Back to his apartment, Kress trudged, sick at the thought of failure in the big leagues after nine seasons, dreading to tell Mrs. Kress and their little girl, Lila Lu, of the news.

And then—Washington fans know what happened. Third Baseman Cecil Travis was hurt. Second Baseman Buddy Myer was thrown out of the game. Kress' orders to report to Chattanooga were countermanded and they gave him back his Washington uniform, put him into the second game. It was one more chance for Kress—his last. He had been kicked about in the big leagues for most of the nine years. A month ago, in desperation, he turned to pitching, found little success. He was on his way out as surely as the sun rises in the east. It was tough for a guy who had been a star.

Red Kress had been a star. When he broke into the big leagues with the St. Louis Browns in 1928 he was a sensation. For most of that season he led the league in hitting. Four years in his five with the Browns he batted more than .300. In 1932 he encountered an inexplicable hitting slump and was traded to Chicago. He tried playing the outfield, and he tried first base, but he never again was a hitting star. Early last season he was traded to the Nats for Bob Boken.

With Washington, Red Kress never could find a regular job. As a utility man he played every position in the infield and in the outfield, but at shortstop, his regular position, his value declined because of his hitting failures. First Lyn Lary and later Ossie Bluege, both superior fielders, beat him out of a job.

AND so they were going to send Red Kress to Chattanooga last Wednesday. They had sent him his ticket, in fact. And then that last chance turned up miraculously. They needed an infielder and they called Kress by phone before he could get out of town. And Washington fans know what he did when they put him in the game—how he made four straight hits against Cleveland.

And Kress has been hitting ever since. In five games since his reprieve from Chattanooga, he has compiled the imposing batting average of .500. And on the crest of his batting revival his fielding has ridden, too. In those five games Kress' defensive play at shortstop has not only been flawless, but sensational. Twenty-five chances he has accepted without an error.

Fighting to stay in the big leagues, the red-headed fellow has Manager Harris, Owner Griffith, and his teammates marveling at his comeback. Here, apparently, is talent they hadn't counted upon. Those seven double plays in which he has figured with such deadly precision have not hampered his cause, either.

Five days ago Red Kress was a washed-up big leaguer at the age of 28, after tasting of fame that had landed him on the league's all-star team of 1930. Today he is a fixture in the Washington infield—the man who came out of the shadows bearing the dying embers of his last hope and fanned it to bright flame. On Broadway they might say he was carrying the torch for the little woman, and their little girl, Lila Lu.

Fish That Got Away, Unseen, Proves Best Prey for a Lie

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

JONES BEACH, L. I., July 28.—This department is always happy to open its columns as a public forum whenever a question of vital public interest arises, such as whether the United States should withdraw from the Berlin Olympic games, or what should be done about the Dizzy Dean when he kicks over the traces, or how to get a baseball team for Brooklyn.

Such a question of vital importance came up at Jones Beach this afternoon where a group of fishermen gahtered and a discussion arose which split the group into two violently opposed camps.

The question was, "What is more annoying, to get a fish almost up to the boat and then lose him off your hook just as you are about to land him, or to get a hell of a big wallop on your line, play him for a moment and then have him get off without ever seeing him?"

One group immediately swore there was nothing worse than to have your fish practically in the pan and then have him flop off the hook. The other two or three backed off, took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and prepared to defend with their lives the premise that of all the hellish sleep-destroying, nerve-wracking experiences that of losing an unseen quarry was quite the worst. Personally, I am inclined to favor this party, but perhaps that is because I do not wish to fall into the other group, which seems to be composed chiefly of congenital liars.

If you will propound this question to any group of fishermen you will find upon examination of the group that sides with losing the fish at the boat that these are usually your record liars and chronic exaggerators. It isn't so much the losing of the fish that pains them as is the fact that everybody on the boat has seen the fish and it is practically impossible to lie about it.

On the other hand, one that hit some 50 feet from the boat and then snapped the line is always a set-up for a speech like this: "There's a big one; boy, feel him pull! I got him, you rascal . . . Ooooops! I think he's off . . . Yeah! I lost him. Hell! That was the biggest fish of the day. Gee, that was a big one. Boy, he snapped the line off clean! Say, that was a big one! I'll bet that fish weighed well over blank pounds (for the blank fill in the top for whatever species you are fishing for, such as 25 pounds for weak fish, 100 pounds for tuna or channel bass, and anywhere up to 1,000 pounds for broad bill). Gosh, that was a big fish. I knew he was a big one the moment he hit."

Now, there is just nothing you can do about that. Nobody else has seen the fish either, and the liar has the advantage of having at least felt him. You know that he is a liar, that his soul is blacker than the ace of spades, and that when he dies he will fry in hell for 1,000 light years, but you can't prove it right at that moment.

American Trackmen Score in Luxembourg

Luxembourg, July 28 (AP).—A traveling American track team took first places in all but one event in a meet with 16 Belgians and 16 Luxembourgers today.

Eulace Peacock, Newark, N. J., won the 100-meter dash in 10.4; John Lyman, of the Olympic Club, took the shot put with a heave of 51 feet 3¾ inches; Cornelius Johnson, Compton Junior College, the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 1 inch. Peacock also took the broad jump, leaping 24 feet 8 7-16 inches.

Concord A. C. Victor.

A five-run rally in the sixth inning enabled the Concord A. C. to defeat Langdon Mills, 9 to 8, yesterday. The Concord brothers and Norris were the big guns in the winner's attack.

3 On, Powell Hits Homer In Second

Hadley Yields 8 Blows; Is Assisted by Four Double Plays.

Griffs' Two-Run Rally in 9th Inning of Opening Game Is Short.

By Shirley Povich.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Joy reigned in the Bronx for only a few minutes today. In the interval between the end of the first game and the third inning of the second game, 21,992 New York fans were reflecting pleasantly upon the 7-6 victory over the Nats that had checked the Yankees' dizzy descent toward third place.

Then Jake Powell jarred them out of their satisfaction. With the bases full of Nats, he smashed a line drive home run far into the left field bleachers and lifted the Washington club into an even break for the twin bill.

The Nats entrained for Washington after the game with a record of three victories in the four game series here, during which they succeeded in hauling the Yankees out of the lead to a point 3 games behind the Detroit Tigers.

Powell, Hadley Star.

Washington won that second game, 7 to 1, and it was a fine bit of collaboration by Powell and Bump Hadley. Hadley held the Yankees to eight hits with the aid of four double-plays, but Powell's third inning wallop with the bases filled explains how come the Nats beat Lefty Gomez and Pat Malone, who yielded only five hits in the second game.

Red Kress, the Nats' Cinderella man, who has been celebrating his narrow escape from the minors with a sensational batting rampage, put the Nats in a 1-0 lead in the second inning of the game when he arched a long home run into the left-field seats, but Gehrig's triple got the run back for the Yanks in the second.

Gomez set the stage for the Nats' triumph when with one out he walked Hadley and Kuhel in the third inning. Johnny Stone then contributed the second of his four strikeouts of the game, but Myer singled to center to fill the bases. Then it was that Mr. Powell took his promotion into the cleanup hitting role seriously and interrupted one of Mr. Gomez's choicest fast balls for the fourth home run of his major-league career. This put the Nats in a 5-1 lead.

Aided by Double Plays.

The Yankees threatened Hadley only mildly after that. In fact, they got only two men as far as second base. Red Kress and Hadley himself each started a double play and Buddy Myer launched two that choked off Yankee threats.

As a precautionary measure, the Nats scored two more runs for Hadley against Gomez in the eighth when Myer walked, Powell singled and Third Baseman Rolfe threw Schulte's sacrifice bunt into right field, but they were as superfluous as Gertrude Ederle's water wings.

It was quite by accident that the Yankees found themselves the winners of that first game. After accumulating a 7-2 lead the Yankees began to fade in the eighth and ninth innings like a Democratic majority when the upstate votes pour in.

The last Washington out, which occurred at a time when the tying run reposed on third, was like manna from Heaven to the Yankees, and almost as providential.

Lady Luck Smiles.

Ossie Bluege, whose single in the ninth had beaten the Yanks yesterday, was at bat and Pat Malone, fresh from the bull pen, was pitching. To say that lady luck smiled on the Yankees at this point would be putting it mildly. She grabbed the Yankees in a furiously affectionate embrace and lavished her possessions on 'em. Which is another way of saying that Bluege, in trying to duck an inside pitch, couldn't get

George Voigt Wins Title; Cards a 69

By the Associated Press.

Melvin Village, N. H., July 28. George Voigt, former Walker Cup golf star, sank a 12-foot putt for a birdie 4 on the eighteenth green that gave him a sub-par 69 and a 1-up victory today over Mark Stuart, of New York, in the final round of the Bald Peak Club's invitation tournament.

Stuart lost the first hole, but halved every other one from that point on until the sixteenth, where he holed a 4-footer for a birdie 4 to square the match. Stuart, former Metropolitan champion, carded a 70, two under par, despite several poor shots.

Voigt first defeated Roy Deston, of Boston, 2 up, to gain the final round, while Stuart advanced at the expense of Bob Cook, also of New York, 4 and 3.

Tigers Widen Loop Lead; Top Tribe

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, July 28.—The Detroit Tigers strengthened their pennant chances today as they drubbed the Cleveland Indians, 14 to 6, which put them three games ahead of the Yankees, who split their double bill with Washington.

It was the Tigers' fifth straight victory.

The game was a pitchers' slaughter, three Indian hurlers being knocked from the mound and one Tiger moundsman yielding to an early onslaught.

Stewart Is Routed.

The Tigers routed Stewart in the first two-thirds of an inning as they scored five runs on six singles. Pearson then attempted to stop the Tiger guns. In the second he yielded four successive hits which added two more runs.

The Indians came back savagely in their half and battered Schoolboy Rowe for five runs on six hits, to give promise of a fairly close game. Hogsett took over Rowe's job with one out, however, and stopped the rally. He held the Indians thereafter until the seventh, when they bunched three hits for their final run.

Pearson went the way of Stewart in the third when he gave two bases on balls then threw Greenberg one which went over for a triple. Goslin scored Greenberg with an infield out.

Lloyd Brown Retires.

Lloyd Brown pitched steady ball in the fourth, fifth and sixth, but retired for a pinchhitter and Winegarner took over the mound in the seventh, yielding a run in that inning and three in the ninth when he was touched for five hits.

Goslin was the star of the game, with five runs batted in on four hits. Greenberg batted in two runs to bring his season's total to 118.

It was the Tigers' eleventh straight victory over the Indians this season.

Stone Misses Chance to Fan 7 Times in Row as Tilt Ends

By a Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 23.—"We want Stone! We want Stone!"

Thus did 8,000 right-field bleacherites among the 21,992 fans in Yankee Stadium chant their desires today in the ninth inning of the second game between Washington and the Yankees.

They wanted Stone, all right. They wanted to see him strike out for the fifth time during the game and for the seventh time in succession.

For Johnny Stone had struck out four times against the Yankee pitching in that second game. And on his last two appearances at bat in the first game he had also struck out. Those six successive strikeouts, four of 'em while swinging, captured the imagination of the bleacherites.

Kuhel Fails.

Thus it was in the ninth inning, with the game hopelessly lost, the bleacher fans pleaded with Joe Kuhel to make a hit and prolong the game that they might see Stone, next up, bat again.

"We want Stone! We want Stone!" they howled derisively. But Kuhel failed them by popping to Lazzeri for the final out, and Stone was spared another appearance at bat.

Back in the seventh inning after his sixth successive strikeout, Stone returned to his right-field post and a pair of oranges hurtled out of the bleachers in his direction, necessitating a halt until Umpire Summers could clear the field of the fruit.

Because there are no records covering his feat, Stone may or may not have equaled or created a new mark for strikeouts covering two games. Back in 1913, Carl Weilmann, a pitcher with the St. Louis Browns, struck out six times in a 15-inning game, but there is no no available history of consecutive strikeouts in two games.

Four players have struck out five times in a game—among them Ossie Bluege, of the Nats.

Scouring the press box for information leading to the possibility that Stone might have set a record of some sort, it was finally concluded that he at least could claim this record:

Most successive strikeouts by a Washington right fielder in Yankee Stadium during a July double-header—Johnny Stone, 6 (1935).

Bagley Downs Crawford in Boat Duel

Takes Title at Regatta, Winning Both Heats in Two-Man Test.

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

HERALD HARBOR, Md., July 28.—Dr. Cecil Bagley, Baltimore surgeon-sportsman, bested Washington's own Andy Crawford in as pretty a duel of high-geared motors, sleek hulls, and driving skill as ever caused a yacht club member to toss his gold-laden commodore's cap overboard, in the 225-cubic inch Maryland State championship here today.

The championship, feature of the final day of the tri-city regatta, was very much a two-man race in both five-mile heats. Bagley won both heats, but the skill, power and effort he was forced to put in the winning made the event a memorable one.

Crawford's blue, red and silver bedecked Ednandy III, winner of the Virginia Gold Cup, Atlantic City and Havre de Grace classics, was first across the starting line by a mere boat length in the first heat. The doctor's Wilmer II was second across the line, followed closely by John Millikin's Maypat. Dave Foster's Martha II was late from the pit and got away almost half a lap behind the leaders.

Thundering around the far turn ending the first lap, Crawford and Bagley were set for a thrilling stretch duel, which found the Wilmer nosing out Ednandy as the craft roared by the official boat the first time. Wilmer's lead had been increased to about 200 yards on the second lap and that lead was held throughout the third time around the course.

Crawford challenged strongly in the backstretch of the last lap of the first heat, but Bagley rammed grimly down on the accelerator, widening his lead and crashing across the finish line with his motor wide open—and some 300 yards ahead of the Washington entry.

Ednandy again was off first in the final heat, but Bagley was not far behind. At the end of the first lap Crawford had increased his lead to some 100 yards. On the far turn into the second lap, Bagley made a desperate attempt to pass his rival, but Crawford cut

Detroit failed to capture the lead Yankees but jumped ahead as soon as it was over by trouncing Cleveland while the Yanks ran into further woes against Washington's seventh-place Senators. When the weewk's program reached its wind-up today the Tigers had won five of their six games and held a three-game lead over the Yanks, who lost five out of seven.

The Senators, who made merry at the expense of Yankee pitching, topped the American League scorers with 48 runs although they made only 67 hits against Cleveland's high mark of 79. They also swatted five homers.

Players Do Umpiring After Heat Gets Ormsby

St. Louis, July 28 (AP).—Stricken by heat, Emmet "Red" Ormsby, American League umpire, was unable to continue in the second half of a doubleheader today between the White Sox and the Browns after officiating in the first game.

Ollie Bejma of the Browns and John Conlan of the White Sox were delegated to do the umpiring at the bases in Ormsby's place. Harry Geisel, staff umpire, worked behind the plate.

Forgotten Men Hold Golfing Spotlight

Public Links Tournament Starts Today in Indianapolis.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 25.—The cop on the corner, the steamfitter over at Casey's flat and Butch, the baker's boy, get their chance at the "rich man's game" this week.

Starting tomorrow, 194 of these hoi polloi of the fairways, players who take the fairways and greens as they find them on municipal courses because they haven't the wherewithal to join private clubs, open a week's struggle with par that may lift them from obscurity to fame as the national public links champion for 1935.

The entry list, while not a numerical record-breaker, is the most representative of golf's melting pot in 14 years of the championship's history. Twenty States, the District of Columbia and far-off Hawaii are represented by their public links aces and by 43 teams which will attempt to win the Warren G. Harding Cup, emblem of the national team championship. Dave Mitchell, Indianapolis salesman, is the individual champion, while the Los Angeles team, consisting of Bruce McCormick, Don Erickson, Johnny Ross and George Lance, holds the team title. The champions are defending their titles, the Los Angeles quartet seeking its third straight victory.

Three One-time Champs.

Including Mitchell, three former champions are in the starting field which will qualify over 36 holes—18 tomorrow and 18 Tuesday—and then settle the big argument over the match play route, but picking a favorite with any degree of certainty was simply guesswork. Mitchell held an edge, however, as he was more familiar with the championship course and was reported very much on his game. The former titleholders in the field with him were Carl Kauffman, of Pittsburgh, known as the "Bobby Jones" of the show because of his string of championships in 1927, '28 and '29, and Charles Ferrera, the San Francisco steel worker, who won in 1931 and '33.

The championship lot, known as the Charles E. Coffin course, loomed like another Oakmont to the players tonight after they had played their final practice rounds. The lowest practice round shot on the tree-infested and water-spliced course that stretches 6,375 yards was a 68, two under par, by Freddy Gordon, of Santa Monica, Calif.

McCormick, of the Los Angeles team champions, scored the next lowest round with a 70 today. Indianapolis players predicted that two rounds of par would run away with the qualifying medal Tuesday night.

Hawaii Out.

Hawaii didn't have a chance to win the team title as one of its players, Bill Smith, the singing cop from Honolulu, was forced to return home because of sickness in his family. Portland, Ore., lost its chance, too, when Neville Walker was forced out with a severe case of neuritis.

Indiana, naturally led the field with 37 representatives, but California was the surprise second in numerical strength with 27. Other States with large entries were New York, 25; Pennsylvania, 16; Ohio, 16; Missouri, 9; Minnesota, 8, and Texas, Wisconsin, Illinois and Michigan, 5 each.

All but Hope Is Gone for U. S. Aces

Americans Expected to Beat British Today in Doubles.

Victory Over Austin an Perry Tomorrow Is Hardly Likely.

By the Associated Press.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 28.—All but hope had fled from the American Davis Cup camp tonight.

Two matches down after the first day's play in an effort to lift the cup from England, the luckless invaders face the almost superhuman task of taking the three remaining matches, including one with the greatest tennis player of them all—Frederick Perry.

That the American combination of veteran skill and youthful promise is capable of accomplishing it, everybody seems to doubt.

Due to Win Doubles.

Although Wilmer Allsion and John Van Ryn are considerably less than the magnificent doubles team they were a few years ago, they are expected to win tomorrow's doubles match from the new English combination of George Patrick Hughes and C. R. D. Tuckey. There is, too, the bright possibility that Donald Budge will re-assert his backhand spell over Bunny Austin in the first of Tuesday's singles. But that still leaves Allison with the thankless task of trying to subdue the swashbuckling Perry in the deciding fray.

To turn that trick the Texan probably would have to produce better tennis than he ever has played in his life. As Allison extended himself yesterday and failed to defeat Austin, and as Perry is one of those fellows who doesn't believe in slumping in a tight place, it looks pretty hopeless.

Pitted Against Best.

In other words, America is pitting two good players against the world's No. 1 and No. 4 stars—and that is like trying to beat a pair of loaded dice.

Nursing the wounds of yesterday's two defeats, the American squad spent today somewhere in the countryside. When they departed from Wimbledon late yesterday they declined to say where they were going. Mostly they just wanted to get away from Wimbledon.

Considering the series all over, but the shouting, most papers today sank the story on inside columns next to the home cooking, leaving the front pages for vivid accounts of the big cricket match with South Africa.

"America failed again," said one headline.

Welsh Trims McElvenny in Uphill, 5-Set Battle to Win Title

Parks Champ Overcomes Wildness

Loses Two Out of First Stanzas, Then Sets Blistering Pace.

By John R. Vosburgh.

REFRESHED and revived by a sorely needed 10-minute rest period, Barney Welsh, beaten in two of the first three sets of his Public Parks championship match with Ralph McElvenney, stepped out on Rock Creek's "center court" yesterday, crackled off a steady stream of untouchable drives, volleys and lobs and won an uphill five-set struggle and his third straight Public Parks title, 3—6, 9—7, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3.

The National Public Parks champion brought the 3-hour match to a close with an inspired comeback which had McElvenney, former national intercollegiate doubles champion, often sharing the part of a spectator as Walsh's aceing shots skimmed over the clay too fast or too well placed to lay a racket on.

Welsh reappeared after the third set wearing shorts instead of the striped ducks which flapped around his legs during the first three chapters. Apparently headed for defeat when the third chapter ended, he swept through the first four games of the fourth set with the loss of only three points, taking the first two at love.

Brilliant Volleying.

His brilliant volleying and low, blistering drives brought him 10 placements in the fourth set alone, many of them forcing McElvenney into error. The fifth set saw him jump to a 5-2 lead before McElvenney temporarily staved off defeat by taking the eighth. In the final set Welsh scored 18 placements alone.

But the match was a different story before Rockville Barney doused his head with ice water, stretched back in a chair and half-dozed during the 10-minute recess. The champion found his foe, a fast friend off the court, playing as fine tennis as a final in a local tournament is likely to produce.

But with all due credit to McElvenney, the champ also found himself lacking the accuracy which generally characterizes his ground game. Although he scored 67 placements to McElvenney's 45, nearly half of them came in the last two sets.

Back Hand Is Weak.

His back hand was woefully weak. During the first set he netted 15 times, most of them off the left side. Throughout the match he netted 66 times. As he expressed himself impressively in the first set, "Aw, Barney, yer wild."

The fact is, Barney was wild. During the week he had confessed that he was "stale." Yesterday marked the completion of his eleventh straight tournament, and as soon as it was over, he declared that he was "laying off tennis" for a week at least.

Welsh came within a hair's breadth of losing the second set and what probably would have been the match. Three times McElvenney had set point. At 5—3 and 40—15 on McElvenney's service, Barney drove for a placement and volleyed perfectly to deuce the game and then took it with a perfect irretrievable drive after McElvenney had driven over the base-line.

Two Crisp Volleys.

The situation was repeated in the next game when McElvenney needed but one point for the set on Welsh's service only to drive out as Barney pounded his back-hand. Two crisp volleys by Welsh in the last game paved the way to the set which he ended with a blinding passing shot as McElvenney rushed in to the net.

Three perfect lobs by Welsh, all for placements, broke McElvenney's service for a 3—1 lead in the last set. On each point, McElvenney, taking the set, seemingly had Welsh on the run only to have him lift the ball high and wide, and drop it inches from the baseline. Four brilliant placements in the last game ended McElvenney's stubborn resistance. Welsh putting away the last point with a smash from mid-court which whistled over the net and landed for an ace fully 15 feet from McElvenney.

Mrs. Dorette Miller and Sara Moore won the women's public parks doubles championship for the second straight year, defeating Mary Ryan and Francis Walker Bassett, 6—1, 6—3, in the final round. The match preceded the men's singles final.

Girl Will Try to Break Swim Distance Record

By the Associated Press.

Frostburg, Md., July 28.—Regina Howser, of Zihlman, near here, who set a record by swimming between Glendale and Deep Creek bridges, in Deep Creek Lake two years ago, will attempt to break her record on Sunday, August 11.

On one occasion Miss Howser swam a distance of 6 miles in 4 hours 15 minutes, and on another swam the distance between bridges three times, a distance of 7½ miles, in five hours.

Edinburg Upsets Mt. Jackson, 6 to 5

Wins in 10 Innings to Oust Foe From Loop Lead.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 28.—Edinburg scored an upset in the Shenandoah Valley League today by downing Mount Jackson, 6-5, in a game that went ten innings.

Litton went the route for the losers, while Dinges, left-hander and star of the game, emerged the winning hurler. Dinges was effective after relieving Gety, who was routed in the third frame.

Bishop, catcher, and Dinges led the hitting attack for Edinburg, while H. Myers was the leading stick man for Mount Jackson. The defeat dropped Mount Jockson from the league lead.

Cox's Birdie 3 On 18th Wins Exhibition

Kenwood Pro, Mackenzie Rally; Beat Houghton and Diffenbaugh.

WITH the match hanging in the balance, Wiffy Cox, Kenwood's plucky pro, calmly came through with a birdie 3 on the eighteenth hole at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday to give himself and his Congressional Club partner, Roland Mackenzie, a spectacular 1-up victory over the host team of Al Houghton and George Diffenbaugh.

A gallery of nearly 700 followed the four pros on their embattled round which saw the visiting combination 2-down at the turn and still 2-down on the Fifteenth, only to birdie that hole for the start of a successful comeback.

The sub-par finish of the winners included a brilliant 34 by Cox on the incoming nine and wiped out an apparently insurmountable lead. After their birdies on the Fifteenth, Cox and Mackenzie continued their hot shooting with Roland barely missing an eagle on the 526-yard sixteenth, two great shots landing barely 6 feet from the pin.

Halve Seventeenth Hole.

The seventeenth saw the teams halve it at par figures and set the stage for Cox's great feat. His four-iron slam finished 3 feet from the pin to end the match.

Houghton shot the individual low score, a 70, including a 34 for the outgoing nine; Cox a 72, Mackenzie a 73 and Diffenbaugh a 75. Cox experienced an erratic streak on the outgoing nine for a 38, 1 over Mackenzie's score and 2 over Diffenbaugh's, but led the incoming advance with a 34 to Houghton's 36, Mackenzie's 36 and Diffenbaugh's 39.

HITS paid off double yesterday as the Mount Rainier Grays downed the Silver Spring Giants, 12 to 6, to advance to top place in The Post Association race of the Maryland County League. The Grays contributed the pigmy total of six hits to their scoring attack but the Giants more than compensated for the home team's paltry hitting with their frequent errors and bases on balls. It was the second straight win for the Grays in the second series.

The Takoma Tigers gave notice of titular aspirations by toppling Cabin John, 11 to 8. In their impressive debut in Post Association ranks, the Tigers displayed potent slugging capabilities as they slammed out 16 hits to overtake Cabin John's early advantage. Bud Bellman's Mount Rainier A. C. also started off on the right foot by trimming White Haven, 16 to 5, on the Wheaton field, and the Washington Clowns handed North Washington its second setback in a 15-to-5 rout.

Prominent in yesterday's competition were the nice hurling of Les Chewning and the hittng of Wanley in the Grays-Giants fray, the slugging and all-round performances of Buddy Jarboe, Art Johns and Raker in Takoma Tigers' victory and the swatting of Newell, Wilson, Gerhardt and Stevens in the Mount Rainier-White Raven game.

THE 12-game winning streak of Ballston in the Red Section of the Northern Virginia League was snapped yesterday by Arlington A. C., which crushed the first-half champions, 9 to 3.

Manager Walter Ruding used his entire pitching staff of Duff, Hull and Owen in a vain effort to stave off defeat, but they all looked alike to the Arlington batsmen. In the meantime Pitcher Rice was setting down the Ballston sluggers in methodic fashion and increased in effectiveness after his teammates had staked him to a big lead.

Jim Tennant realized a pitcher's dream with a brilliant no-hit, no-run game for Manassas against White Star Market. The final score was 5 to 0, Manassas making all its runs in the first inning. Tennant fanned 13, and not a single White Star batter reached third base.

Middleburg Victor.

Middleburg leaped back into the sectional pennant scramble with an impressive 5-to-4 win over Falls Church as Luck outpitched Bob Lyons. Middleburg's victory halted Falls Church's winning streak and put the latter in a tie for leadership with Arlington, Ballston and Manassas.

Yesterday's turn of events in the White Section games served only to tighten the pennant race and to presage prospects of a gruelling struggle for Post honors among five of the six contenders.

Led by the Ball brothers, Marshall defeated Purcellville, 9 to 3. Purcellville's loss, combined with Fairfax Station's 7-to-2 success over Millwood, again deadlocked these rivals for first place. Wells, Shu and Mohler bore the brunt of Fairfax's attack against Millwood, as Al Mahoney limited Millwood to six hits.

Paul Jarman's Vienna team climbed to within a game behind the pace setters by trouncing Aldie, 7 to 4. Donaldson pitched a steady game throughout. Phillips, Nelson and Stoy were the batting stars for Vienna.

Army Poloists Nosed Out by Greenbrier

Secor's Goal Near Finish Provides 8-to-7 Margin for Collegians.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 28.—In one of the closest and hardest fought games of the season, the Greenbrier Polo team defeated the War Department quartet today, 8-7.

The Collegians got away to an early lead when Rand scored on a long forehand in the first minute of play. Jack Young followed with a fine back hand to put his team 2 points ahead, but the Army forces came back to even the count on a foul shot by Lieut. Col. Devers and a set-up by Lieut. Reed in front of the Greenbrier goal.

The local outfit took a commanding lead in the second period when Rand Young and Secor scored in rapid succession to forge ahead going into the third chukker, 5 to 2.

The Army tied the score with one goal in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Miss Opportunities.

With the score tied entering the final period, both teams missed fine opportunities for goals, but with five seconds left to play, Secor pushed a shot through the upright after a melee in front of the Army's goal.

Jay Secor, 1935 captain of the Intercollegiate Championship Yale Polo team, played a neat game for Greenbrier, hitting accurately and backing up his team on the defensive and coming through on the offensive to pick up three goals.

Extra Dry Takes Lewes Boat Race

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lewes, Del., July 28.—Extra Dry, 11-foot sneakbox, owned by W. Virden Burton, of Lewes, chalked up her fourth victory of the season in the Lewes Yacht Club's sixth Sunday event, today, when she placed first in a fleet of 14 sailboats competing for the Henlopen trophy.

Sailing with Charles Lowe, of Lewes, as crew, the Extra Dry finished in 81 minutes 8 seconds, scoring a total of 57¾ points.

The Dipper, Perinne sneakbox, owned by George and Douglas Fleming, of Ardmore, jumped into the lead while the fleet was milling around at the starting line, and kept ahead around the two laps. Closely in her wake were the Extra Dry; None Such, of Capt. J. Lynch, Lewes; Skippy, of Frank Carter, jr., Lewes; and Bouncer, of A. Pianka, Milton.

Because of the light wind only six boats finished in the required sailing time of two and one half hours. Boats finishing and their handicap rating follow:

Extra Dry	81.06
Dipper	81.45
Bouncer	86.30
None Such	87.34

Strasburgers Win to Near Pennant

Down Woodstock, 12 to 1, in Shenandoah County Loop.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tim Artz, ace portside flipper of the Strasburg team, was in rare form throughout the game, allowing but five scattered hits and fanning 14 Shamrock batters. Jake Sheetz, the Woodstock starter, was relieved in the fourth inning after seven runs had scored, and after being tapped for six blows. The ex-sheriff was the victim of poor support. Raymond Sheetz, who relieved him, was futile in his efforts to silence the heavy-batting spree of the up-and-coming Strasburg team and was battered from the hill also. Bob Lambert finished the game for the Shamrocks.

Woodstock's only score was in the last inning when Wickham tallied on an error by Fisher on a grounder.

Balthiss crashed a home run in the second, for the third circuit clout seen on the local diamond this season. Yates was the fielding star for the victors, making one of the most spectacular catches ever seen here, while Coffman fielded in great form for Woodstock.

As a result of the game today, Strasburg neared the pennant in the loop and Woodstock slipped deeper into third place.

Middleburg Four Wins in Maryland

Scores in Every Chukker to Triumph, 13 to 7.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, July 28.—The veteran Fauquier Loudoun Four, of Middleburg, Va., working like a piece of well-oiled machinery, clicked off goals in every chukker today at Stevenson to defeat the Maryland Polo Club, 13 to 7. The Marylanders started out with a 4-goal handicap.

Equaling the handicap advantage of their rivals in the first chukker, the Virginians settled down to steady, and at times spectacular, stroking and riding to add two goals per chukker thereafter, until the final period, when they made only one.

It was C. F. Fair, Fauquier-Loudoun No. 3 star, who sat the fast pace in the game, which, although obviously one-sided, was swiftly played and cleanly fought, only one foul being called during the entire contest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FRONT ROYAL, Va., July 28.—Front Royal defeated Harrisonburg, 7 to 5, here this afternoon in one of the most weird but exciting games of the season. Joe Stankus, on the mound for the Stars, outsteadied Hutchinson, his rival all the way, but errors gave the visitors three unearned runs.

The winning runs came in the eighth on a walk, fielder's choice, Harvey's double and Goodwin's single. Harvey, Jewett and Stankus got two hits each for the Stars, and Wills and Leavel led for Harrisonburg. Schmidt also hit for the circuit.

Orange, Va., July 28.—The two-game winning streak of the Orange club was rudely halted today in the last half of a twin bill, Heurich winning, 11 to 0, after dropping the first game, 2 to 0. Tisdale, of Orange, and Watt, of the visitors, met in a pitchers' battle, the former having a slight edge on the former big leaguer. Orange drove over their two runs in the first on successive doubles by Mundy and Haney and Kessler's single.

Benninghoff, winner over Front Royal Saturday, essayed to pitch the second game and fared well until the seventh, when he was blasted from the box, six runs crossing the plate. Smith, his successor, fared no better, the Brewers adding four in the ninth at his expense.

Turf's Elite on Hand, Saratoga Opens 30-Day Meet Today

Omaha Leads Champions Stabled

Two Features on Card for First Day; Many Juveniles to Run.

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., July 28.—This little historic town, situated on the fringe of the Adirondack Mountains, blossomed into a small-sized metropolis today as the country's greatest thoroughbreds and their retinue converged for the opening of the 30-day racing meeting tomorrow.

Omaha, the 3-year-old champion, is here to keep his engagement in the $20,000 Travers on August 17 and the Saratoga Cup on the final day, August 31. Discovery, the handicap king, is due this week from Arlington Park. Cavalcade and Peace Chance, scheduled to return to the races here, are on the grounds, rapidly rounding into shape to offer Alfred G. Vanderbilt's ace an argument.

The barns are full of 2-year-olds, including many high-class juveniles which have yet to face the barrier, while other top-notch youngsters will head this way after the running of the Futurity at Arlington Park, Saturday.

Seventy-four horses, six of them steeplechase performers, have been named for the six races to be decided tomorrow. Heading the list are 15 2-year-olds nominated for the sixty-first running of the $4,000 Flash Stakes over five and one-half furlongs and 12 sprinters slated for the seven furlongs of the $2,000 American Legion Handicap.

Three of the country's foremost owners, C. V. Whitney, Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Dodge Sloane, will send out powerful entries in the Flash. Whitney will be represented by Triumphant, Tatterdemalion and Red Rain. The last has not faced the barrier, but is said to be the best of the juveniles in the stable.

Bob Smith, trainer of Mrs. Sloane's thoroughbreds which dominated the racing at this point last year, will saddle Delphinium and the little known Paralda, while racing in the Vanderbilt silks will be the ranking juvenile of his stable, Postage Due, Speed, and Reelection, the latter another newcomer.

Identify, another Vanderbilt horse, tops the field for the American Legion Handicap, which has drawn many of the leading Eastern sprinters. Others named include Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, the consistent Only One from Mrs. Deering Howe's stable, George D. Widener's Chicstraw, William Woodward's Vicar, C. V. Whitney's Motto, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Black Buddy and Mrs. Sloane's Black Gift.

Giants Shut Out Brooklyn in Twin Bill

Home Runs Aid Pitchers to Gain 6-0, 1-0 Decisions.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 28.—Two brilliant exhibitions, each abetted by a home run punch, enabled the New York Giants to increase their hold on first place today as Brooklyn's Dodgers twice bowed before a crowd of more than 27,000.

The scores were 6 to 0 and 1 to 0. Joe Moore's home run, with two on in the first game, encouraged Carl Hubbell in his five-hit exhibition, while Mel Ott's twenty-third home run of the season provided the only score of the second struggle in which Clydell Castleman whitewashed the Dodgers with four hits.

As he mowed down the enemy in inning after inning, Castleman seemed completely recovered from the cracked bone in his throwing hand which had kept him out of action since July 6. It was a tough struggle all the way for him as Emil Leonard allowed the Giants only eight hits. Ott's smash into the screen atop the right field wall, with none on and two out in the sixth, was the only hit to affect the scoreboard.

Michigan Park Upsets Duke & Otey Nine, 12-5

Michigan Park provided a stunning upset in yesterday's Post Association games in the Police Boys Club League by trouncing Duke & Otey, 12 to 5.

The New Deal Young Men's Shop whitewashed Colmar Manor, 9 to 0; No. 5 Boys Club drubbed the Modern Cleaners, 9-0, and No. 11 Boys eked out a 10-9 decision over the Joe Kuhel's in an 11-inning battle in the other league contests.

Patterson Is Star.

Dale Patterson was the whole show yesterday as Indianhead defeated the Washington Red Sox, 8 to 5. Dale pitched his usual steady game, and slammed out four hits in as many times at bat to take hitting honors.

Cards and Pirates Divide Double Bill

Champs Win, 4-3; Lose, 5-4; 36,000 See Games.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 28.—Approximately 36,000 shouting fans turned out today for the first Sabbath double-header ever waged in the majors here, and saw the St. Louis Cardinals halt Pittsburgh's 9-game victory march by a 4-to-3 decision in the first game. The Bucs snapped back to win the second game, 5 to 4.

Paul Dean went to the mound in the ninth inning of the second game with the bases full and one down, relieving Bill Walker. Dean forced in the winning run, walking Lloyd Waner. Woodie Jensen smacked a homer into the right field stands in the eighth to tie the count.

Cubs Down Reds For 9th Straight

Win, 11-7, Sweep Series; Close Home Stand.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 28.—Pounding Gene Schott and Paul Derringer for nine runs in the first three innings, the challenging Cubs walloped Cincinnati, 11 to 7, before 11,500 fans today to sweep the four-game series and run their current victory string to nine straight.

Bill Jurges, with a double and three singles, led Chicago's 13-hit attack. Charley Root went the route for his sixth straight triumph. He gave 12 hits, including Ival Goodman's eleventh homer of the season.

The victory ended the Cubs' spectacular July home stand with 20 victories in 23 games and gave them a record of 22 victories in their last 25 starts. They have lost only one of their last 15 games. That was the 14-to-13 setback given them by Brooklyn in 11 innings last Monday.

12th Straight Is Won By Chevy Chase Grays

The Chevy Chase Grays scored their twelfth straight victory yesterday when they gained an easy 6-to-0 decision over Terminal Refrigeration on their home diamond.

The game also represented the eleventh triumph in a row for Watters Butcher, Grays' pitcher, who allowed only one hit until removed in the fifth because of a hurling assignment today. Walter Smith granted the losers one more safety.

Out Fishin'

By Jack Hawley.

FORTUNATE fellows who can take a vacation at this season of the year, even though possessed of a sizable bank roll, should not overlook the advantages of fishing in our own Chesapeake Bay and its tidal waters.

The writer has received several reports from anglers who have gone several hundred miles north and east of Washington in search of better fishing. The anglers concerned are residents of other cities. The extra amount of money required for these trips would have given these same fellows better sport fishing and in two cases a complete set of new tackle had they remained in the vicinity of real fishing grounds—Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and the Chesapeake—the latter, the peer of all good salt-water fishing.

For the benefit of newcomers to our city who are not cognizant of the excellent fishing that can be obtained, the following is passed on to you that it may enable you to use a part or all of your vacation time to relax and enjoy the full benefits derived from fishing and the pleasure of getting away from the confinement of buildings.

Do you know that we have in this vicinity 25 game fish and seven bait fish, exclusive of species belonging to both categories? There are more than 200 species of fish in that great body of water—Chesapeake Bay. Some may be taken occasionally and others quite frequently.

Now for the bait: Peeler crab and soft crab for all species; shrimp for croakers (hardheads), blood worms for all species; cut spot, ground alewives (lures, drones and spoons and feathered baits) for the killing bluefish and weakfish (sea trout). Ground alewives are used for still fishing, commonly known as "chumming." The bait is allowed to drift with the tide in small quantities, the boatman adding additional "chum" as needed. No sinker is used and the hook baited with a small piece of the ground fish or small slice. The strong odor and blood caused by the grinding of these alewives is scented by bluefish from remarkably long distances and is considered by the majority of sport fishermen the best method to use for successful bluefishing.

Alewives are obtained from commercial net fishermen and are of no value for table use. Only a few places in the upper part of the bay are able to furnish this kind of bait without ample notice, while the extreme lower portion of the bay cater to a greater degree to "chumming." It is best to always notify your boatman that you wish to have him procure fresh "chum" the day before your arrival. The number of people making up your party will guide him in the quantity required.

Secure your shrimp at the local wharf or other desirable place before leaving the city and don't take chances on procuring it down the bay, as it is not always avaliable. Crab bait is not as plentiful this year as it has been in the past and is quite expensive. The writer has paid around $1.25 per dozen for small peelers, half the size as procurable last season. Cold weather and dredging by commercial boats have contributed to the depleted supply.

If you contemplate fishing over the week-end, be sure to engage you a boat several days in advance and do not wait until the last minute and be disappointed. This is often caused by too few anglers taking advantage of the excellent fishing during the early part of the week, resulting in a grand rush for Saturday and Sunday. Give the boatman a break and fish with him when he isn't completely tired out from the long hours of fishing the last two days of the week and see the improvement in service and results obtained. Be sure to request ice and plenty of it. Never leave your fish on the floor of your boat during the heat of the day without ice.

Read "Sportfishing in Chesapeake Bay" by John C. Pearson. You can obtain a copy of it by writing the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, for the price of five cents. Further information can be had by addressing your letter to this column or by telephoning Atlantic 1926 after 6 p. m., except on Saturday and Sundays when your correspondent will be somewhere on the briny blue waters of the Chesapeake.

Braves Take Game But Lose One First

Phils Win, 4-1, but Then Bow, 11 to 10.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 28.—The Braves finally won another ball game today—their twenty-fourth of the season—but only after the Phillies took the opening game of a double-header, 4 to 1, before a sparse Sunday crowd of 4,000.

McKechnie's team eked out an 11-to-10 triumph in the nightcap after overcoming the Phils' 10-4 lead. Six Philadelphia errors helped the Braves considerably in their long, uphill pull.

Browns Attain Half Of Chisox Twin Bill

St. Louis Rallies to Win, 4-3 After Losing, 14-6.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 28.—Rogers Hornby's league trailing Browns split a Sunday double-header with the Chicago White Sox today, landing on John Whitehead to win the nightcap, 4 to 3, after dropping the opener, 14 to 6.

Three St. Louis pitchers were ineffectual in the lopsided first game as the rampaging Chicago batsmen rang up a total of 20 hits, scoring 10 runs in the second inning.

Linke Quits Hospital; Rejoins Washington

New York, July 28 (AP).—Ed Linke, Washington pitcher who was struck on the head by a batted ball in a game with the Yankees Friday, left the hospital tonight and was able to rejoin the Nats for their trip home. Linke was struck by a line drive off Jesse Hill's bat.

Dr. William Cassebaum, Yankee Club physician who attended Linke, said the injury, which was at first believed to be serious, turned out to be only a slight concussion.

Grant Wins Title, Upsetting Marston

Shoots Birdie 3 on 18th for 1 Up Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

Eastern Point, Conn., July 28.—Bobby Grant, of Wethersfield, Conn., today took the measure of the favorite, Max Marston, of Philadelphia, one up, to avenge a defeat the former national amateur champion handed him four years ago and win the 18-hole final match of the Shenecossett men's invitation tournament.

Never allowing himself to be headed, although he three times shot away a lead of one hole, the former New England amateur champion ended the match with a sparkling birdie three on the eighteenth hole after he had halved four preceding holes in a row to beat back Marston's closing challenge.

It was the first time Grant had met Marston since 1931, when the veteran Philadelphian, who has won the tournament six times, defeated him, 2 and 1, in a quarter-final match.

Powell's Clout Gains Split For Nats

his bat out of the way and the ball caromed off it into Malone's hand for the necessary final out.

Jack Redmond had put the Nats back in the ball game in the eighth when with Manush on first, the rookie catcher hit his first big-league home run, a line drive sock into the right-field bleachers that cut the Yanks' lead to 7-4.

Needing three runs to tie the score in the ninth, the Nats didn't show any initiative until two were out. Then Buddy Myer doubled to left and Jake Powell scored him with a single to center. Powell took second and third unmolested and Heinie Manush contributed the third straight hit against big Walter Brown, a single to right that scored Powell.

Kress Gets Single.

The situation became downright serious when Red Kress banged the fourth straight hit off Brown, a single to center that put Manush on third, and Manager Joe McCarthy frantically signaled for Malone to rescue Brown. Then it was, with the count on Bluege one and one, that the fatal accident befell the Nats' hopes.

Earl Whitehill pitched the ball game away for the Nats in the early innings. With the help of two errors, the Yanks rushed four runs across the plate in the second. Kuhel encouraged 'em when he dropped Bluege's throw on Lazzeri's grounder, and Chapman banged a double to right. Crosetti's grounder took a freak hop past Bluege to score Lazzeri and two more runs scored when Jorgens singled to left and Bluege premitted Manush's throw to bounce into the Yanks' dugout. Hill's single drove in the fourth run of the inning.

Pick Up Another Run.

The Yanks picked up another run in the fourth but it was not until the seventh that they placed the ball game beyond reclaim by the Nats. That was when Jesse Hill smashed a home run into the left field stands with Crosetti on base to boost the Yanks' lead to 7-2.

Johnny Allen had departed from the game at the end of the second inning when he strained a shoulder muscle and the Yanks' 4-0 lead was given into the keeping of Walter Brown. From the second to the ninth Brown staggered until he finally collapsed under the weight of those four straight hits. On his way to the showers he paused in the runway with Bluege at bat to watch the Yankees make their victory certain, despite themselves.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 28.—The Boston Red Sox made it two out of three over the Athletics by taking today's game, 11 to 3, before a crowd of less than 5,000.

Wedo Martini, a Philadelphia sandlot pitchers, started for the As, but was knocked out in the fourth inning after Boston had scored five runs.

With three on bases in the ninth, Manager Cronin smacked a double against the right-field fence and three runs were scored.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., July 28.—Climaxing a brilliant winning streak of 16 straight games, the St. Mary's Celtics defeated the Alexandria Eagles here today, 4 to 2, to win the semi-pro championship of the city for the fifth consecutive year.

Taylor, of the Celts, and Davidson, of the Eagles, hooked up in a fine hurling duel—with Taylor the victor by virtue of allowing only five hits, while his opponent, who was imported from the Bureau of Investigation team for the day, granted nine.

The Celtics scored their first run in the second inning on singles by Hamilton and Barry, followed by a double steal of second and home. They scored again in the third and in the sixth, Russ Kidwell, manager, driving in both tallies. Hamilton scored the last run in the eighth following a succession of wild tosses on the part of the Eagles.

Dr. Bagley Takes Boat Title in Duel

Crawford opened his motor wide for the first time in the second heat as the boats flew toward the official boat in the second lap. Bagley's bid was successful as the Ednandy just couldn't seem to find the power and speed and stamina to beat off the determined attack. The Wilmer was some 50 feet in front of Crawford's craft at the close of the second lap and that lead not only was held, but increased to some 200 yards at the finish, despite some very skillful manipulating and jockeying on the part of Crawford in futile efforts to regain the lead.

The winner's speed for the first heat was 44.732 miles an hour and he averaged 45.547 in the final. The world's record for this type of race is 46.778, set at Havre de Grace last week by Crawford in the same boat he drove today.

Uncle Sam, the Real Estate Man.

The HOLC (Home Owners Loan Corporation) has had to start 712 foreclosure suits. It has already taken over 104 homes from citizens who have not met the terms of Government loans. Thus Uncle Sam assumes the role of hard-hearted sheriff as well as real estate operator.

"Here are the papahs! Out ye go!" says Uncle Sammie.

"Ye heard me," says uncle sternly as the Federal orchestra plays 'Hearts and Flowers.' "Git!"

* * * *

Many people who borrowed money to add a bay window, repair the porch or completely remodel the old home have "shown an obstinate refusal to pay as agreed," it is announced. So the U. S. A. takes over the shebang and puts on a for sale or lease sign.

* * * *

In addition to his many other worries Uncle Sam must now assume the cares of a landlord. How times have changed!

* * * *

Once upon a time his only real worries came in time of war, flood or famine. Today he is apt to be called up in the middle of night to hear complaints like "The kitchen sink is leaking again," "You'll have to send a man up to repair the hot-water boiler" and "The plaster is falling off the living room ceiling."

* * * *

The most momentous debates in Congress may soon be over questions such as "What will take paint stains off an oak floor?" and "Is the Administration policy on reconditioning a stucco bungalow correct?"

* * * *

Possible Real Estate Ads:

For Sale—Cozy home in Berkshires; Government advanced $3,000 loan on this property; it is easily worth half as much. Will sell for $1,500 or what have you?

* * * *

Right in the midst of a crucial exchange of messages with Japan, Uncle Sam may be interrupted by a phone call from Penobscot that unless he does something about the roaches in the kitchen the tenant will vacate.

Chapter XV.—Bootleg Murder Guns.

Here there must be some enlightenment for those trusting souls who believe that crime could be ended by placing a sales embargo on all pistols, or insist upon the registration of all persons buying weapons of any kind. It would not halt a single activity of the more experienced lawbreakers. Their guns do not come from legitimate sources.

Most persons who are killed by super-offenders come to their death from gunshot wounds inflicted by weapons primarily designed for the defense of this country. They may be automatic pistols or rifles manufactured for the United States Army. Or they may be machine guns which left the factory to go into the possession of law enforcement officers.

In the files of the Department of Justice are innumerable cases regarding the robbery of armories. Here is a tremendous source of supply; the gangster's favorite weapon is the United States Army .45 automatic Colt pistol. Thousands are in circulation in the underworld. When Clyde and Marvin Barrow, together with their women, Bonnie Parker and Blanche Caldwell, started forth upon their succession of robberies and murders which finally brought death to three of them and prison for a fourth, one of their first acts was to rob a Government arsenal in Oklahoma. Here they stole half a dozen automatic rifles, enough ammunition to supply a company of soldiers and so many automatic pistols that when finally they were retrieved by special agents, a bushel basket was required in which to carry them.

Guns and money are in the underworld, especially if they have been stolen from an armory. These represent quality, and there has been no original purchaser to confess that he sold the weapons to John Doe, who, upon being found, admits that he sold them to Richard Roe, who in turn sets law-enforcement agencies on the trail of the present holder.

Weapons Bootlegged.

A somewhat different procedure follows in the case of the machine gun. When it can be stolen, that is done—as happened with the Dillinger gang, especially when it held up the police station at Warsaw, Ind. As a general rule, however, the gun reaches the criminal through several transfers, one of which includes a crooked gun dealer. There are many of these bootleggers of weapons and the Bureau of Investigation, wherever possible, is doing its utmost to send them to prison. Not until this phase of criminality is wiped out and armories properly protected against theft will the criminal world be deprived of its weapons, no matter how many laws are passed.

These crooked dealers always manage to know when a sheriff is about to lose his office. Then a confederate drops in to see the sheriff and establishes the fact that he is a guard on a private estate, the owner of a store which has been robbed recently or a rich man afraid of burglars. Any story will do as long as it is convincing. He makes the retiring sheriff a better offer for his machine gun than will be forthcoming from the new incumbent. He generally gets it.

Here is a fallacy of American law-enforcement methods. Just why a sheriff who may be in office no longer than two years, or a patrolman who may be fired in three months, should be forced to buy lethal weapons as personal property is past understanding. Police departments do not insist that an officer supply his own patrol wagon, or his own armored motorcycle, or his own jail. They do insist that he furnish his own gun—and forget entirely what he does with it after he leaves the service. I know what has happened to many machine guns bought by sheriffs who really could not afford the expense. They sold them and asked few questions.

Once a gangster has gotten his hands on a weapon, be it United States Army automatic or law-enforcement machine gun, the criminal believes himself safe if he abrases the number with an emory wheel or files it off. Thus he works on the same theory as that by which numbers are changed or mutilated on automobile blocks. There is a difference, however.

The steel in an automobile block runs deep enough for the fractures caused by the original stamping at last to cease, leaving clean metal. This is not true of guns. Here the bed of the metal is comparatively shallow, and the blow by which the number is cut into the steel breaks up the molecules to a surprising depth; to a certain degree it changes the temper in that portion of the gun. Thus the numbers are in reality stamped entirely through the steel, making the methods of restoration highly successful.

Swimmers Retrieve Guns.

Two days after a notorious criminal was killed in Chicago last year, an automobile was seen to stop near a lagoon in that city. Some men threw several objects into the water. A passer-by notified the police. Children swimming nearby also had noticed the action.

By the time officers arrived, the children had dived to the bottom of the lagoon and retrieved the objects, which had proved to be an automatic pistol and a machine gun. The police took the weapons to headquarters, from which place they were turned over to the Bureau of Investigation.

When a criminal's pistol or machine gun comes to the crime laboratory, it immediately becomes suspected of every Federal shooting or killing which has remained unsolved.

Bullets and exploded cartridges are carefully picked up whenever possible after a brush with bandits. The same is true during an investigation of a wounded man or a killing. These bits of evidence are held in Washington, upon the same theory which demands that fingerprints be held.

This Chicago gun apparently presented an alibi in that it bore numbers which told its history. It had been sold to a Midwestern sheriff and lent by him to another law enforcement officer. It had been stolen from this second person during a jail break. It apparently had been in the possession of the robber since that time, only to be thrown away by his pals after death. But the Bureau of Investigation questions a suspected gun as thoroughly as it investigates humans.

The usual box of cotton waste was arranged and the gun fired into it. Bullets were then retrieved and examined under the comparison microscope. They did not match any of the various bullets held for investigation into murder cases, thus again apparently establishing the weapon's innocence. Cartridges were then examined as compared to cartridges found after various shootings. An expert frowned.

"Here's a queer thing," he said. "The bullets don't match. But the cartridges have the same characteristics as those involved in two murders!"

Enlargements Made.

Photo enlargements were made. Now the evidence that these cartridges had been fired from the same gun were even more pronounced. By dividing these enlargements and fitting half of one to half of another it was possible to see that the various hammer, breech and ejector indentations flowed, one into the other, as though this were all the same photograph, instead of fitted halves. Again there was mystery. At the time of one of these murders this gun had not even left the factory.

The weapon was examined for possible evidence that the numbers had been changed. That was proved impossible. Again the gun was fired. Still the bullets failed to correspond with any of the slugs on record. Finally an expert said:

No other theory is possible. The Government now is searching for the latest of underworld tricks, a dealer or string of dealers who rent machine guns to gangsters and who seek to confuse their mechanism so that the scientific work of ballistic experts will count for nothing.

The Bureau of Investigation is adamant in its desire to place crooked gun dealers in prison. Several were sentenced last year, among them Michael Shine, of San Francisco, who, as far as the public knew, merely ran a store called the Sequoia Importing Co. Special agents, however, dug up the information that Shine's best source of revenue seemed to come from inveigling soldiers to steal weapons and ammunition for sale to the underworld. A long period of surveillance followed. At last the man was caught with more than 4,000 rounds of .45 calibre bullets, the most popular type of machine-gun cartridge. These had been stolen from Fort Winfield Scott. The soldier involved was court-martialed. Shine and three of his confederates received prison sentences ranging from a year to three years and six months.

The modus operandi file is another feature of the laboratory. For several years there had been in epidemic of seasonal burglaries in Berkeley. For a certain part of the year, the city would be comparatively free from theft. Then suddenly, night after night, the telephones of police headquarters would jangle to the announcement of a new set of depredations.

Various Districts Watched.

Special patrols of detectives and plain-clothes men were sent to various districts—only to find that the burglar had operated in another part of the city. Then suddenly, as quickly as the burglaries had begun, they would cease, and all would be peace again.

Chief August Vollmer had kept an accurate check on the modus operandi in every case. In each instance, there were evidences which made him believe that the robberies were being committed by the same person. Beyond this there was the fact that the depredations inevitably began at a particular time of the year, and ended after a regular period. At last a latent fingerprint, the first real clue, was found.

Chief Vollmer caused a canvass to be made, during which his detectives ascertained that about thirty persons in Berkeley regularly arrived in the city at a certain period of the year which corresponded to the beginning of the robberies and left about the time the thefts ended. The names of all these persons were procured. These, together with the one latent print, Mr. Vollmer forwarded to the Identification Unit of the Bureau of Investigation.

A search was begun in the files, working from the names of recorded persons instead of from the classification of the ten fingers, as is customary. Name after name proved fruitless. Finally an expert pulled the card of William Berger, whose name corresponded to that of a man who, according to Chief Vollmer, periodically left Berkeley with the Alaskan fishing fleet, by which he was employed. This was the burglar. A comparison of the fingerprints of the middle fingers of each hand, as left behind at the Berkeley robbery, with the middle fingers of the prints on the card of William Berger, former convict Number 27372 from San Quentin, showed them to be identical. A telegram shot forth to Chief Vollmer. Berger's house was put under surveillance. Shortly afterward the burglar was killed, while attempting to escape arrest.

On The Air Today

The National Symphony Orchestra will be presented to the people of the United States for the first time Wednesday night. The National Broadcasting Co. will pick up 30 minutes of the symphony's program immediately following the intermission and will broadcast it through the facilities of the Blue network, which has as its key station WJZ in New York. The Washington outlet of the Blue network is WMAL.

Sandor Harmati will conduct Wednesday night and the program, which will be on the air at 9:30, will include several of Harmati's compositions, both instrumental and vocal.

N. B. C. also reports that tentative arrangements have been made to provide three more National Symphony programs for the network.

A program, such as the Symphony, is termed a sustaining program in radio and no station is obliged to use it simply because it is on the network. However, it is the practice of most affiliated stations to use a program of this type and particularly as it is the first time a Washington Symphony has been made available.

Weather permitting, the Mickey Walker-John Anderson light heavyweight match will be aired tonight by WOL, from New York, at 9, with Jack Fraser describing the fisticuffs . . . Radio Joe holds "Eddie Gilmore Night," WMAL, at 7:30 . . . The Princess Pat Players present "Man Who Wnated to Die," WMAL, at 8:30 . . . Mickey McKee, who whistles four notes simultaneously, is Pick and Pat's guest at WJSV, at 7:30.

Helen Hayes, distinguished American actress, is starred in the Radio Theater's premiere at WJSV, at 8. Miss Hayes' vehicle is "Bunty Pulls the Strings" with scenes and action laid in a little village in Scotland. Supporting her are John MacBryde, Peter Donald, jr., and Laurence Fletcher. A week from tonight the Radio Theater presents "Lightnin'" with Wallace Beery in the title role.

Two revivals are in the offing. The Atwater Kent Hour returns to the air via Columbia September 19. The forthcoming series will maintain the Atwater Kent tradition of presenting only the most prominent figures in the music world. No definite time has been announced for the return of "The O'Neills," but late summer is the tentative announced time. The script will begin where it left off and the first broadcast will be devoted to a synopsis of what has gone on before.

It's enrollment day for canaries at WJSV. That is, if they're amateur canaries. The plot is another feature event to keep folks' minds off the heat or something. Anyway, the Sun Dial for one week will receive enrollments and then in some equitable but at this moment unknown manner the feathered amateurs will be auditioned and a winner selected. I am not certain on this point, being in somewhat of a fog over the whole business, whether the auditions will be private or broadcast under the direction of Arthur Godfrey. I do know the winning singer will get a cage —a gilded cage, of course. Ann Gillis, of WJSV, will be glad to tell all canary owners of the more technical aspects of the contest. The number is ME. 3200.

The Contented Hour is made up of old favorites tonight, WRC, at 9. For example: "Red Wing," "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland," "Kiss Me Again," "Bicycle Built for Two," "On Moolight Bay," "Rings On My Fingers," "Take Back Your Gold," "Back In Your Own Backyard" and many others.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Maxine Davis, magazine and feature writer, has gone forth to discover the America of 1935. She will write of her experiences for The Post. Her thirteenth article appears today.

Oatman, Ariz., July 28.—The climb up the side of the mountain is perilous. Not because of any defects in the marvelously engineered roads, but because the vistas of endless majesty take your eyes and your mind off the gray ribbon ahead.

"These terrific crags put us in our place," I was thinking this day. "The New Deal, and the Square Deal, and Sixteen-to-One are as a rock rolling down that precipice * * * Surely the men who live in their shadows must see things as they are."

Thus jolted back from infinity, I tumbled into Oatman.

Revived Ghost Town.

Oatman is a gold mine village. A ghost town that's taken on substance, thanks to a monetary policy evolved in Washington. And Oatman is on strike. I learned that immediately from the men hanging around Honolulu Jim's place. The mine, mill, and smelter workers in the famous old Tom Reed and Big Jim mines are all out.

Once upon a time, in the boom days of 1914 and 1916, the Tom Reed and the Big Jim were paying the biggest wages around here. Then the ore sort of petered out. Wasn't worth much. People drifted away from Oatman. It only came to life on Saturday nights, when the railroad men came over from Needles and Kingmen to drink and dance in the big open-air pavilion, perched shakily on the side of the mountain, and so old and uncertain that I'm sure a violent kick by an irritant merrymaker would knock it all down.

Then the price of gold went up a year and a half ago and the mine reopened. Like magic all the remaining old prospectors and a lot of new-timers came back to the town. The miners, alas, are getting only $4.50 a day, and the muckers $4 a day. They think they ought to have a dollar a day more.

Owners Think Otherwise.

The owners say they've put a lot of improvements into their property in order to operate it, and maintain their stockholders are entitled to consideration prior to anyone else.

A civil chap, with a stubble appropriate, I suppose, to tradition, and a magnificent cork helmet, told me all about it. There isn't any trouble. Everybody, about 250 strong, walked out. The man from the international union came down to help. He was negotiating that minute. And the men sat around the bar at Honolulu Jim's, and the women waited with their marketing and their children outside the Arizona Hotel.

"You know how it is, lady," said my adviser, eyeing the District of Columbia tags on my car. "You know the President, I suppose. Ain't he told you how wealth oughta be distributed in wages? Well, he's got the idea, only we gotta help him carry it out."
